FOR STATE HIGHWAY

Dracut Citizens Boomed the Proposed RoadAt a Largely Attended and Practically Unanimous Meeting Last Evening — Situation
Explained by Rep. Holt of Methuen

That the people of Dracut are practically a unit for the proposed state highway from Lowell to Lawrence, along the north bank of the Merrimack river was demonstrated last evening when a mass meeting of the citizens of that town to discuss the project drew one of the largest crowds ever seen at a special meeting.

The principal speaker of the evening was Rep. Holt of Methuen, the "father" of the bill, and explained the nature of the bill in a clear and convincing manner, and when he had finished and had answered the questions put to him there was little opportunity left for opposition.

Lowell men presented a petition for the new road to the executive committee of the board of trade yesterday morning, and that committee, after deciding upon $3000 as all that they would advise Lowell's spending on it, voted to favor the project and to be represented before the hearing on Monday. The estimated cost as given by the county engineer shows that Lowell's share of the expense will be under $2000.

Chairman Fred A. Bassett of the selection committee presided over the hearing and stated the purpose of the gathering. He called attention to the presence of Rep. George H. Stevens of Dracut and Rep. Holt of Methuen, both of whom would speak to the meeting relative to the bill and legislation now pending.

Chairman Bassett introduced Rep. Stevens, who stated that his brother representative was better able to explain the merits of the matter to be discussed, as the Methuen representative had framed and presented the bill which covered the project of a state highway over the river route, as called.

Mr. Stevens asked the parties inter-

IN POLICE COURT

Boston Man Fined for Stealing Trousers

Lawrence Quirk, of Boston, who stole two pairs of trousers at the Rutnam & Sons Co. clothing store in Central street last Saturday night, was arraigned in police court this morning on a charge of larceny, and through his counsel, Lawyer John Quinn, of Boston, entered a plea of guilty, was found guilty and ordered to pay a fine of $15 within five days or be committed to the Lowell jail for three months.

Lawyer Quinn, who is known in and about Boston as "Honest John," informed the court that the young man was a member of a highly respectable family in Boston, but had started to drink of late and that the larceny was committed while he was in an intoxicated condition and not in full control of his senses.

He told the court that he thought if a fine were imposed it would be sufficient to cause his client to realize the seriousness of the offense and he felt that the young man would do better in the future.

Supt. Welch informed the court that he had communicated with the police of Boston and that he had no record in that city. Questioned by the court Quirk said that about ten or twelve years ago he was arrested in Boston for malicious mischief.

After sentence was passed Lawyer Quinn paid the fine and Quirk was allowed to go.

Neglected His Children

Adolph Volkeryk pleaded guilty to a complaint charging him with failing to provide proper support for his two minor children, Paul and Margaret. Mrs. Volkeryk said that she left her husband about a year ago owing to his habits and that since then she had been working in the mill and supporting the little ones.

The defendant said that he was willing to support his children if his wife would relinquish her claim to them and allow him to have them. This she refused to do, however, and the court felt that the children would receive better care from the mother than the father.

Volkeryk was found guilty and ordered to pay $1 a week to his wife.

Threatened His Wife

Napoleon Champagne pleaded guilty to a complaint charging him with threatening his wife with a pistol. The defendant said that he was willing to support his children if his wife would relinquish her claim to them and allow him to have them. This she refused to do, however, and the court felt that the children would receive better care from the mother than the father.

Volkeryk was found guilty and ordered to pay $1 a week to his wife.

Quimby Before the Local Court

Quimby's first appearance in the Lowell court was during the early part of December of last year when he was found guilty of stealing a pair of shoes. His young wife appeared in his behalf and after making a strong plea for clemency for her husband Judge Hadley imposed a small fine and he was allowed to go.

Though the police did not know it at the time he was before the court, Quimby was after escaping from Grasmere and was wanted by the New Hampshire authorities. A week or more later a description of Quimby was sent to Lowell and he was arrested by Inspector Maher and Patrolman Ryan and turned over to the New Hampshire officials.

PRES. MURPHY

Of Philadelphia Central Labor Union

Held in $3000

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 26.—The beginning of the second week of the strike against the Philadelphia Rapid Transit Co. finds the city authorities apprehensive of what today and tomorrow may develop in spite of the great gains toward the complete re-establishment of order made in the last two days. Today is a half holiday in many of the industrial plants whose employees are strongly in sympathy with the strikers and the ability of the police to control crowds is expected to be again severely tested. Last Sunday proved to be the hardest day on the police of any during the strike.

The arrest of John J. Murphy, the young president of the Central Labor union, who was given a hearing today on the charge of inciting a riot, has added to the uneasiness in labor circles. The warrant for Murphy's arrest was issued by the direction of Director of Public Safety Clay, following the publication in an afternoon paper of the following statement, said to have been made by the head of the Central Labor union:

"You can depend upon it that by Sunday's meeting a general strike will be called. If one man is shot in Kensington there will follow a carnival of riot and bloodshed which will startle the entire country. I should not care to endorse such a move, as it would not predict whether all trades unions in the city would join in a walkout."

John J. Murphy, president of the Central Labor union, arrested last night charged with inciting to riot, was arraigned today and held in $3000 bail.

WARRANT FOR HEAD OF CENTRAL LABOR UNION

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 26.—Following the publication of a statement alleged to have been made by John J. Murphy, president of the Central Labor union that "a general strike should be called immediately. I think it is inevitable. There are men in the northeast who can shoot as

Murphy denied that he had made such a statement for publication. He says that he merely expressed an opinion as to what might develop if the strike continues and the company refuses to arbitrate. The published statement itself, he says, shows that a warning and not a threat was intended. Like Pratt who was denied bail when arrested on a similar charge a few days ago, Murphy was not locked in a cell over night, but was permitted to enter bail before a friendly magistrate for a hearing today.

The flat refusal of the board of directors of the Rapid Transit Co. to entertain a proposition for arbitration leads many to believe that the contest between the company and the union will continue until one or the other surrenders. The committee of prominent clergymen who proposed the arbitration plan will hold another meeting to consider what further move, if any, shall be made.

Compared with yesterday there was noticeable change in the early hours of the day in the matter of street car facilities. Cars were operated under police protection on nearly all the lines. Two or three lines, the company claim, are being run with nearly the full number of cars. The strikers are continuing their picket work and here and there gain recruits to their ranks. The transit company asserts it can put more cars in operation if the city would furnish the protection.

The menace of a general sympathetic strike still hangs over the city. President Murphy of the Central Labor union says he fully expects the Central only at its regular meeting tomorrow to endorse such a move, as it would not predict whether all trades unions in the city would join in a walkout."

DARING ESCAPE

Of Prisoners Who Were Arrested

in Lowell

Men Sawed Iron Bars in Hillsboro, N. H. and Escaped in Light Clothing—They Are Still

at Large

Joseph Beaugard of Nashua, who broke into a store in Wilton, N. H., during the latter part of November of last year was arrested by Inspector John A. Walsh and Patrolman Matthew McCann a few days later in this city; Herbert L. Quimby, who escaped from Grasmere and was later arrested here by Inspector Martin A. Maher and Patrolman Bart Ryan on December 18th, together with Patrick Brown of Manchester, yesterday made a most daring escape from the prison dormitory of the Hillsboro, N. H. county house of correction at Grasmere and are still at large.

The police within a radius of 50 miles of Manchester have been notified of the escape, but at the present writing the men were still at large. With the mercury standing at 24 degrees below zero the three men, thinly clad, saved their way out of the prison and fled through the snow to the railroad tracks leading to Manchester, making good their escape. One of the men, Beaugard, was handicapped with a peg leg, but successfully eluded the pursuers who were on the track of the prisoners shortly after they made their escape.

Long Term Men

All three were long term men. Beaugard was committed in January to serve a year for breaking and entering clothing store in Wilton, N. H. the latter part of November. Brown was committed in December to serve nine months for drunkenness; and Quimby, who was committed in December to complete a six months' term for drunkenness, only a few days of which had been served, and a month additional for escaping from Grasmere last May.

Sensational Escape

The escape was one of the most sensational in the history of the institution. With a saw improvised from a broken clothing store in Wilton, N. Quimby Before the Local Court

Quimby's first appearance in the Lowell court was during the early part of December of last year when he was found guilty of stealing a pair of shoes. His young wife appeared in his behalf and after making a strong plea for clemency for her husband Judge Hadley imposed a small fine and he was allowed to go.

Though the police did not know it at the time he was before the court, Quimby was after escaping from Grasmere and was wanted by the New Hampshire authorities. A week or more later a description of Quimby was sent to Lowell and he was arrested by Inspector Maher and Patrolman Ryan and turned over to the New Hampshire officials.

TERM OF SHERIFFS Bill in Legislature Extends It to Five Years

BOSTON, Feb. 25.—The house of representatives yesterday passed to a third reading a bill extending the term of sheriffs from three years to five, after one of the sharpest and liveliest debates of the session.

During his speech in opposition to the bill Mr. O'Brien of Boston declared that the "worst lobby" ever known at the state house, men who are known to have some mysterious influence in the courts of Suffolk county, who in the past have had something to do with juries and their verdicts, had been working for the bill.

Debate on the measure was opened by Mr. Allen of Braintree, who pointed out that sheriffs are usually given many years in office and he believed less frequent elections would result in an even better discharge of their duties.

White for the Bill

Mr. Cummings of Pittsfield opposed the bill, on the ground that the present law gives ample opportunity to keep a good man in office, while a chance should be given to get rid of a bad man as soon as possible.

Mr. White of Brockton favored the bill, as did Mr. Warren of Chelsea and Mr. Cushing of Boston, while it was opposed by Mr. Turner of Waltham and Mr. O'Brien of Boston.

Mr. Knight of Boston also spoke in opposition, on the ground that no reason for the passage of the bill has been given; he believed the county rings are already strong enough.

Bayley of Lexington and Brayton of Fall River closed debate for the bill; on a rising vote it was ordered to a third reading, 75 to 73. On a roll call the result was 105 to 90.

Remington's Pension Approved

The legality of the retirement of Ex-Sergeant-at-Arms Remington was again brought before the house when Representative O'Brien of Boston moved to strike out of a pension bill an appropriation of $170 for the payment of his pension.

He said it was never intended to permit any head of a state department to recommend his own retirement or to permit the retirement of any elected official, and it therefore provided an appropriation for it. The amendment was rejected.

Mr. Dean of Cambridge said the committee on ways and means, in reporting the bill, knew nothing of the interest of a previous legislature in passing the present law; it found a law on the statute books which in the opinion of the attorney-general permits the retirement of this former official, and it therefore provided an appropriation for it. The amendment was rejected.

Milk Stations

In the house yesterday these committee reports were received: Public health—A bill to give local boards of health greater power over dairies; a bill authorizing the establishment of milk distributing stations in places having more than 10,000 inhabitants leave to withdrawing from the bill providing for appeals from local boards of health.

Rules—Leave to withdraw on the bill providing for an investigation of the disbursement of the Chelsea fire relief fund.

Labor—A resolve providing for a commission of five to investigate factory inspection.

Military affairs—Leave to withdraw on bills providing for a second-class armory in East Boston.

Legality of Schofield Bill
An order was reported in the house asking the opinion of the supreme court as to the constitutionality of the Schofield gratuity bill.

Convention Delegates Bill
In his maiden speech in the house Mr. McGrath of Natick moved to substitute for an adverse committee report a bill providing that only delegates and alternates elected in caucus shall be seated in political conventions.

The hour of adjournment cut off debate.

Work of the Senate
In the senate yesterday afternoon reports of committees were read as follows:

Birth certificates, a bill to punish the forging of birth certificates.

Merchandise, leave to withdraw on the petition of Frank W. Thayer, for legislation to require the use of safety guards for elevators.

Metropolitan affairs, leave to withdraw on the petition of Edward R. Warren, for legislation to use a portion of Franklin park for an historical park.

Labor, a bill to perfect the codification of the labor laws of last year by inserting the words "state inspector of health" for "district police," where the latter occurs in the law as to inspection of workshops and factories.

On motion of Senator Mahoney of Holyoke the report on salaries of Suffolk county probate judges was postponed to March 4, and on motion of Senator Burnham of Boston the rules were suspended and the bill for the appointment of assistant assessors in Worcester in March was engrossed.

The senate adjourned at 1:30 p.m.

Committee Hearings
The committee on legal affairs yesterday gave a hearing on Representative John L. Donovan's bill to prohibit women under 21 from entering unescorted a Chinese restaurant.

Mr. Donovan, ex-Rep. William Newton of South Boston, Dr. Wm. F. Brown, ex-Rep. Conley, Rep. O'Donnell, Mrs. Susan E. Stevens, Charlotte H. Smith and the Lowell police board urged the bill.

It was opposed by Rep. Freeman O. Emerson, John Ingram, L. G. Brockway of Lynn, Horace D. King of Lynn, Charles K. Sherry of Boston, Walter L. Hayes of Boston, and others.

Henry N. Cummings, Henry Westcott, president of the archdiocesan board of the American Federation of Catholic societies, Mr. A. J. Teeling of Lynn, Rev. Ambrose P. Roche of Waverly, spoke in favor of three bills to extend the provisions of existing law to prohibit even the suggestion of that which is obscene or likely to injure the morals of the young in bill posters, pictures, moving picture shows and also for the bill to prohibit the admission of children under 14 during hours when the picture shows are open or after 6 o'clock in the afternoon.

The petition of Mary Morton Kolow that the bureau of statistics shall investigate conditions that obtain in employment and intelligence offices was given a hearing by the committee on legal affairs.

A hearing was given by the committee on education on the petition of Jas. F. Carey, to raise the compulsory school fund, which is now 14 to 16. Representative Morrill of Haverhill spoke in advocacy of the measure, while President Frederick P. Fish of the state board of education and Mrs. Frank W. Page were heard in opposition.

Hearings were given by the committee on metropolitan affairs on two bills affecting Cambridge and Somerville. The first called for the building of a boulevard from Broadway park, Somerville, and the other for the erection of a bath house on the Mystic river, Somerville. Mayor Woods of Somerville, Charles W. Eliot, president emeritus of Harvard, and City Solicitor Kean of Somerville appeared in favor of the boulevard measure, while Arthur M. Spring, assistant corporation counsel of Boston, opposed it.

Prof. Dolbear buried
MIDDLETOWN, Feb. 25.—The funeral of Prof. A. E. Dolbear, who was noted for his electrical inventions and mechanical genius, was held from the Goddard chapel here today. The service which was very simple in character, was concluded by Rev. Dr. William H. Hamilton, president of Tufts college. Prof. Dolbear was formerly professor of physics at that institution.

Arrest of Kelly
WOODSTOCK, N. B., Feb. 25.—The recent arrest of William Kelly of Richmond, N. B., and his subsequent conviction in a United States court at Portland, Me., following which he was sentenced to a complete year term in the federal penitentiary at Atlanta, Ga., for an assault on an American customs officer, has been made the subject of an international affair.

Correspondence received here shows that James Beavey, British ambassador to the United States, has made representations to Secretary of State Knox that Kelly was arrested by American officers on Canadian soil and forcibly taken across the border to Hamilton.

Me. Ambassador Bryce, it is stated, has requested Kelly's immediate release, and the matter of damages claimed by Kelly will be taken up later. Secretary Knox's reply to Ambassador Bryce's request is now awaited with interest here. Frank Carvel, M. P. of Carlton county, made the representations in behalf of Kelly to Ambassador Bryce. Mr. Carvel attended Kelly's trial in the United States court at Portland.

Kelly, it is alleged, was a notorious smuggler along the Maine-New Brunswick boundary, and the assault on customs officer Burns of Hamilton, Me., was the result of a smuggling episode.

MAYOR MEEHAN

Calls Special Meeting of Aldermen

BOARD WILL CONSIDER STATE HIGHWAY

Matter of Great Importance to Lowell and For Which Our Endorsement and Contribution is Requisite

Mayor Meehan has called a special meeting of the aldermen for this evening to draw jurors. The board will also consider the question of the new Lowell-Lawrence road which went to the common council last Monday night.

The question went to the common council in the form of an order requesting the city solicitor to go before the committee on roads and bridges and favor the bill for the Lowell-Lawrence road. The order was introduced by Councilman Achin by request of Senator Hibbard. The question was put as to the adoption of the order, and it was unanimously voted not to send the city solicitor to Boston to advocate the road. Another order of a similar nature will go to the board of aldermen this evening, at least that was the story at city hall this forenoon.

Widow Loses
IN SUIT BROUGHT AGAINST ROY-AL ARCANUM

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Feb. 25.—Justice W. S. Andrews yesterday set aside a verdict of $3000 in favor of Mary C. Wilcox against the Royal Arcanum. The justice had directed a verdict for the full amount claimed, but after considering the case reversed his decision.

Mary C. Wilcox is the widow of Frank Z. Wilcox, who was expelled from the Royal Arcanum. The court holds that Wilcox was not a member of the society; that the action of the supreme council in expelling him was voidable but not void.

Mrs. Wilcox is now allowed to bring proceedings to have the supreme council's action declared void.

Chief Hamilton
Of Lawrence Fire Dept. Two Men Arrested by Again Injured Worcester Police

LAWRENCE, Feb. 25.—Chief Engineer James A. Hamilton of the fire department figured in a runaway accident while responding to an alarm from box 37 yesterday, which may retard the progress of his recovery from serious injuries sustained at the Rutaw street fire on Feb. 14.

By a coincidence the alarm was from the same box as was the first bell alarm since Feb. 14.

In turning the corner of Lawrence and Common streets the sleigh overturned and the chief and his driver, Daniel O'Neill, were thrown out, the horse continuing up Lawrence street.

Near Lawrence and Valley streets the sleigh struck a pump containing Mrs. Jane Devlin of West Andover, damaging the pump and shaking up the woman, although she was not sufficiently injured to require the services of a physician.

The chief jumped into a sleigh with Assistant Agent Fred H. Sargent of the Lawrence Gas company and proceeded toward the fire when he met his horse, returning on the run. Chief Hamilton attempted to stop the runaway and was knocked down.

The horse continuing along Lawrence street, avoiding other conveyances, and turned into Canal street. At the Water street crossing the gates were down, his course being diverted to the left by freight cars. His career was checked on the bridge over the north canal.

BIG FIRE SCARE EXCITING SCENE

On East River Front in Young Girl Jumped from New York Deck of Cruiser

NEW YORK, Feb. 25.—A spectacular fire on the East river front today gave the firemen a hard fight from both the land and water sides to prevent its disastrous spread to nearby tenement structures. As it was the loss is estimated at upwards of $50,000, chiefly to the paper warehouses of Nicholas Cantasano & Co. at 185 South street, a four story structure, which was practically burned to the ground. A squad of firemen had a narrow escape when the north wall of the building collapsed, scattering bricks and debris about them.

Who Had Kept Her Away From Home—One of the Marines Jumped After Her and Saved Her Life

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 25.—With the entire complement of marines drawn up for inspection last night on the quarterdeck of the cruiser California so that she might pick up among the men the one who had kept her away from her home, Miss Emma Schwad, 19 years old, ran from the side of her mother who had accompanied her and leaped over the side of the cruiser into the waters of the harbor rather than face the ordeal. The next moment a sailor in full uniform jumped after her. When the ship's lifesaving crew lowered the boat the blue-jacket could be seen in the water below with the girl in his arms. The girl and her rescuer were picked up just as the sailor's strength was failing.

Miss Schwad was rushed to the harbor emergency hospital where her death was feared. The girl was unconscious when she was picked up and the records of the affair last night do not contain her name.

The girl's mother had made complaint to officers on the cruiser and had been accompanied by her to pick out the marine who she alleged was responsible for her remaining away from home.

STEAM ENGINEERS
LISTENED TO LECTURE BY MR.
HAWLEY OF BOSTON

Thomas Hawley, of the Hawley School of Steam Engineering in Boston, delivered an interesting and instructive lecture last night before the local union of the International Steam Engineers' union at 32 Middle street last night. The lecture was a very comprehensive one, the different parts of the engine being explained at considerable length.

Following the lecture an entertainment was held, the following numbers being carried out:

Songs by Edward Quinlan, Frank McCarty, M. Hilledge and J. Bluff; a life solo by John Butler; a tin whistle solo by the same man; a tin whistle duet by Messrs. Muffet and Muffet, and other numbers. The Starbird orchestra furnished music throughout the evening.

The affair was under the direction of the educational and entertainment committee of the union.

The next lecture in the educational series will be given by Henry A. Howe, a marine engineer connected with the Quaker City Rubber company of Philadelphia, who will talk on "Modern Packing."

BIG ATHLETIC MEET
BOSTON, Feb. 25.—With an added incentive in the form of a new cup being contested for, nearly 7000 schoolboy athletes gathered in Mechanics building today at the twenty-first annual indoor track championship meeting of the New England Interscholastic A. A. The meet was held under the auspices of the Boston A. A. donor of the new cup.

Last year Phillips Exeter academy became permanent owner of the old cup given by the B. A. A. having won several legs on it at former meets. Although there were many strong athletes representing the numerous high schools and prep schools entered in today's meet last year's champion was again the favorite and it looked as though the New Hampshire boys would carry off the honors. Worcester academy, the runner-up in 1909, and Phillips Andover academy, which has never picked as strong contenders, for the highest number of points. A special train carried the Exeter delegation to this city.

BRUTAL ATTACK
Man Was Stabbed by Five Men

NEW YORK, Feb. 25.—Detectives secured the city yesterday in a search for the five men who rode all over the west side in a taxicab Thursday to find Jacob Greenthal, and when they found him attacked him numerously, stabbing him eight times and slashing his torso.

Greenthal's condition was critical yesterday. He formerly took an active interest in political matters. He got into trouble at a west side polling place last election day.

That the motive for attack was not robbery is shown by the fact that $532, which the man had in his possession, was not disturbed. There has been no arrest.

CAMBRIDGE, Feb. 25.—Instructors in schools and colleges in Massachusetts may now take the new course in arts and sciences at Harvard in order that they may become familiar with the depths of these two subjects. The board of overseers of the university at its last meeting approved of the extension of the department of arts and sciences asked for by the faculty of this course in order that those teachers may receive help in their work. John H. Hoper was appointed dean of this course.

JUSTICE GOFF
Expresses Pity for Girl
He Sentenced

NEW YORK, Feb. 25.—Justice Goff, in the criminal branch of the supreme court yesterday, disposed of the case of Clarinda Di Pasquale, who was convicted of killing her new born baby, by sending her to the state prison for women at Auburn for not less than two years nor more than three years and six months.

"This case has given me a great deal of mental anxiety," the justice remarked in imposing sentence, "and if I consulted my own wishes in the matter I suppose I would deal differently with her, but the oath of office as judge precludes his feelings from interfering with his duties."

The woman, who is 17 years old, killed her baby last September by throwing it out of a window. When charged with the crime, Greenthal, the person charged with the crime, pleaded guilty to a suspended sentence, promising to support her in case of her release.

Kelly, it is alleged, was a notorious smuggler along the Maine-New Brunswick boundary, and the assault on customs officer Burns of Hamilton, Me., was the result of a smuggling episode.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 26.—Three Americans whose niches in the Arctic hall of fame are securely and permanently filled comprise the board of investigators proposed by the house subcommittee on naval affairs to pass upon the validity of Commander Robert E. Peary's claim to have reached the North pole April 6, 1909. They are Rear Admirals Winfield S. Schley and George W. Melville and Major General Adolphus W. Greely, all retired. The first named is known to the public for his part in the Spanish war, but he won renown in 1884 for Arctic exploration work. He commanded the expedition which rescued Lieut. Greely and six survivors of his expedition at Cape Sabine. Lieut. Greely (now major general, retired) reached farthest north—83 degrees 24 minutes—before he was compelled to abandon his hunt for the pole and await the rescue which reached him in the Schley expedition. Rear Admiral Melville made three Arctic voyages, in one of which he recovered the records of the Jeannette expedition. By special act of congress he received a gold medal and was advanced 15 numbers in rank in the navy for bravery in the Arctic regions.

In a short time he was transferred to Baltimore, Md., to the Jarvis V. S. S. hospital and she went with him and they wanted her to stay and she did; she worked seven months in the sanitary commission, then she volunteered as a nurse and after that she enlisted for three years or during the war and was one of the matrons and remained in the unit for most of the war. She came home July 7, 1917.

EIGHT STOREKEEPERS

Have Been Ordered to Appear in Court

The proprietors of eight small stores in this city have been summoned to appear in police court on Monday morning upon complaint of Supt. Redmond Welch of the police department. The specific charge against each is "keeping open his shop on the Lord's Day."

The following is a list of storekeepers notified to be in court: Michael J. Dolan, 122 Alken street; Max Goldman, 89 Chestnut street; William Suker, 33 Thordike street; Nicholas Zanichos, 134 Middlesex street; Peter Tavoularis, Salem street; Michael Asdorian, 28 Lakeview avenue; Peter Ploppoulos, 551 Broadway; and Ahmed Hamdy, 276 Middlesex street.

According to section two, chapter 423 of the Acts of 1909 the board of police has the power to grant licenses to reputable persons who on secular days are retail dealers of ice cream, confectionery, soda water and fruit to keep open their place of business on the Lord's day for the sale of the above mentioned articles.

Now many of the storekeepers have failed to take out licenses and have been enjoying the same privileges that the bona fide licensed keepers have.

ELECTRICIAN BURNS

IS AT WORK ON THE TEST BOARD

Electrician Michael Burns of the police department and his assistant, Joseph McDermott, have been busy engaged for the past few days in cleaning up the test board in the telegraph room at the police station. The levers, contacts and various brass fixtures are being removed, cleaned and polished.

The fittings of two circuits are taken out at a time, but the work of cleaning does not in any way interfere with or impair the service of the telegraph system.

The test board was installed about ten years ago and is now undergoing its first thorough cleaning. When the work is completed it will be put out of the many difficult pieces of work that Electrician Burns has performed in connection with the police telegraph system.

FINE GIFTS

FOR JOSEPH M. DONOGHUE LAST EVENING

A genuine surprise and presentation of gifts was accorded Mr. Joseph M. Donoghue at his home, a flazette street last evening, when a party of 40 of his young friends called to tender him a farewell reception. Mr. Donoghue is to assume an important clerical position in the census bureau of the department of commerce and labor at Washington on March 1 and hence the gathering at his home. When the gathering arrived Miss Florence Kane presented in a few well chosen words an elegant watch and gold chain to Mr. Donoghue. Mr. John P. Quinn, with appropriate remarks, presented a dress suit case. Mr. Donoghue spoke briefly in appreciation of the gifts and the kind words of the donors. There were piano solos by Mr. Thomas O'Hare, John A. Quinn, Joseph Donoghue and John J. Gilbride, Jr., and songs by Miss Margaret J. O'Donoghue, Miss May Dunn, Theophilus, Miss Annabel McLaughlin, Miss May Barry, Miss Gertrude Holden and Miss Ethel Rowe. Recitations were given by Arthur Gill and William J. O'Donoghue. Refreshments were served. The party broke up at a seasonable hour, wishing every success to Mr. Donoghue in his new field of work.

NO WAGE INCREASE

NEW YORK, Feb. 26.—Representatives of the eastern railroads which have been asked by their employees for an increase of wages announced yesterday that in the face of a steady decline in the cost of operation and a steady decline in rates, they were unable to grant general wage increases, in addition to those already made. They took the position that there were general increases in 1928 and 1927, with no subsequent decline during the period of 1927, was the case in many other industries.

The railroads repeat their familiar argument that, whereas rates have decreased, everything that the railroads buy has increased in price.

Statistics are quoted to show that the average wage of employees of the railroads in 1928 a year as against less than $500 in '78 other industries employing skilled labor.

No statement was forthcoming last night from employees.

Last Sunday it is understood that several members of the police department, in plain clothes, visited a number of the stores and made purchases. In whatever places purchases were made, the proprietors will appear in court.

According to section two of chapter 423 of the Revised Laws the proprietor of an unlicensed store, who makes sales on the Lord's day is liable to a fine not exceeding $50. The law reads as follows:

"Whoever on the Lord's day, keeps open his shop, warehouse or workhouse, or does any manner of labor, business or work except works of necessity and charity, or takes part in any sport, game, play or public diversion, except a concert of sacred music or an entertainment given by a religious or charitable society, the proceeds of which are to be devoted exclusively to a charitable or religious purpose, shall be punished by a fine of not more than $50 for each offence; and that the proprietor, manager or person in charge of such game, sport, play or public diversion, except as aforesaid, shall be punished by a fine of not less than fifty nor more than five hundred dollars for each offence."

BRITISH CABINET

Will Try to Limit Lords' Veto Power

LONDON, Feb. 26.—The Daily Telegraph asserts that the cabinet has abandoned all idea of reforming the house of lords, and will now direct its whole energies to limiting the veto power of the lords. In this, the Telegraph says the government will proceed by bill, may by resolution first and bill afterwards, as originally intended. This concession to the radicals will not satisfy the Radicals, the paper thinks, because the ministers have not yet decided to put the veto question before the budget.

The Radical Chronicle partly confirms the foregoing by stating that the government resolutions will deal with the veto, leaving the question of the reform of the house of lords for future consideration.

TEXTILE SCHOOL

ANNUAL DANCE OF GAMA CHAPTER AT COLONIAL HALL

Colonial hall was the scene of a very delightful party last night, the event being the annual dance of the Gama chapter of the Phi Psi fraternity of the Textile school. The affair was largely attended by members and friends of the organization and there were many guests present from out of town.

The hall was prettily decorated, the fraternity colors, black and yellow, predominating. A large replica of the fraternity pin, done in electric lights and hung over the centre of the stage, was the hub of the scheme.

Althorpe's orchestra furnished music and at intermission refreshments were served. The patronesses who occupied a cosy corner of the hall were: Mrs. A. G. Cunningham, Mrs. Harry Pollock, Mrs. L. W. Frazier, Mrs. Stephen E. Smith, Mrs. Arthur A. Stewart, Mrs. Fenwick Umpleby.

The reception committee was: Mr. George Cogswell Welch, Mr. Carl E. Bailey, Mr. Kurt Huggins, Mr. Andrew S. Waterman, Mr. John H. Hutton.

The active members of the local chapter are: Irving N. Stronach, Ernest C. Hay, Albert A. Hodgkins, Everett B. Rich, Woodbury K. Howe, Harold G. Nicholson, John H. Hutton, Kurt Huggins, Alfred Walker, Norman B. Reed, Carl E. Bailey, George Cogswell Welch, Henry H. Harrison, James S. Goodwin, William W. Watson, Walter E. Kehew, Howard M. ## THE BIG BOUT

May Not Take Place in 'Frisco

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 26.—That it is by no means certain yet that the Jeffries-Johnson fight will be staged in or around San Francisco became known last night, when it was learned that negotiations are about to be reopened with Salt Lake City with a view of ascertaining the big battle could not be held there. That the promoters of the fight have not met with the reception here they had hoped for and that they are not entirely agreed as to the course to pursue has become apparent and has led to various rumors of another split between Ted Rickard and Jack Gleason and intimations that extortionate demands are made for a place for an arena. Last night it was said that Rickard, becoming dissatisfied, had reopened negotiations with Salt Lake City. Rickard's denial notwithstanding, and it was learned that representatives from Salt Lake would be here in a day or two, among them J. Langford, manager of the Salt Air pavilion, who is coming in response to a telegram from Rickard. While not denying that matters were not entirely satisfactory, neither promoter would make a statement.

MAY USE AMPHITHEATRE

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah, Feb. 26.—In response to a telegram from Ted Rickard asking a further conference concerning the use of the Salt Air amphitheatre for the Jeffries-Johnson fight, J. E. Langford, manager of the Salt Air company left for San Francisco last night.

THOMAS F. WALSH, SICK "MINING KING," AND THE $100,000,000 BABY HEIR

MRS. EDWARD B. McLEAN AND THE $100,000,000 BABY

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., Feb. 26.—

With Thomas F. Walsh, the mine owner of Colorado and Washington, D. C., who is ill here, having come from Palm Beach, Fla., by the advice of his physicians, is his only child, Mrs. Edward Beale McLean, with her husband and her baby son. The baby has been called "The $100,000,000 baby" in view of the fact that he is heir to the fortunes of two immensely wealthy grandfathers, Thomas F. Walsh and John R. McLean. It is not thought that the combined fortunes of the two men would reach the figure given, but there is no doubt that each of them possesses an enormous pile of wealth. The McLean baby is named Vinson Walsh McLean, and he is ten weeks old. His mother was formerly Miss Evelyn Walsh. The only other child of Mr. and Mrs. Walsh, was killed in 1906 in the automobile accident in which his sister was seriously injured. John R. McLean, paternal grandfather of the baby, is the owner of the Cincinnati Enquirer and the Washington Post.

WRESTLING BOUT

Maupas Beat Killonis at Graeco-Roman

One of the most entertaining wrestling matches ever held in this city drew a fair sized gathering to Associate hall last evening when Emile Maupas, the Canadian, his weight, and defeated John Killonis, champion middleweight of the west, mixed style, the Canadian getting two falls, Graeco-Roman style, at which he is a past master, and Killonis taking one at catch-as-catch-can. Maupas weighed about 170 while Killonis weighed 160. The Greek also claimed that he was unfamiliar with Graeco-Roman wrestling, and hence was at a disadvantage. Killonis took the first fall, catch-as-catch-can, in 27 minutes, while Maupas got the second in 15, Graeco-Roman. The man making his fall in the shorter time had the privilege of naming the style of the third session and hence Maupas decided upon Graeco-Roman. The match was as clean as a whistle and spectacular in the extreme. Every old kind of a hold was shown and likewise all sorts of head pins and bridges, for neither man wasted a moment throughout. In the Graeco-Roman style Maupas did a head hold stunt on his opponent that brought the crowd to its feet and was worth the price of admission. Graeco-Roman Killonis about foreclosed with both arms, he lifted him off the mat and swung him around like a sort of whirling dervish, for almost a minute. Finally dropping him face foremost on the mat. Both winner and loser were cheered by the vast satisfied crowd. After the match Killonis stated that he was in bad on Graeco-Roman, but would put up money for a match with Maupas, catch-as-catch-can style.

CALLER DRAW

LEWISTON, Me., Feb. 26.—Before the Armory Athletic club at city hall last night, Gus Larrabee of Lewiston and Al Limerick of Haverhill, Mass., fought six hotly contested rounds to a draw. In the third Larrabee landed a hard left on Limerick's chin which felled him. Limerick showed much cleverness in evading Larrabee's hard swings, his fast foot work being especially noticeable.

In the semi-final Young Porter of Auburn knocked out Kid Gagnon of Lewiston in the fifth round of what was to be a six-round go.

In the preliminary Shadow McCormick and Joe Chartrand, both of Lewiston, went six rounds to a draw, and Thunay Dreen of Lewiston and Young Carlanneau, both of Lewiston, fought six rounds, honors going to Dreen.

JOHN J. HIGGINS

May Seek Position of Attorney General

BOSTON, Feb. 26.—Attorney General Dana Malone announced last evening that he is not a candidate for reelection this fall. In a statement he said:

"Many of my friends have suggested that I should again be a candidate for attorney general at the election next fall and they have been good enough to say that if I should conclude to do so there would be no contest in the republican convention. I have considered this question carefully and have finally decided that I shall not be a candidate."

"When my present term expires I shall have been attorney general for five years, having driven all my time to the duties of the office. I, therefore, feel that I shall have served the commonwealth as long as I ought, and will then be ready to retire and to resume the private practice of my profession."

The decision of the attorney general caused no surprise in political circles as it has been generally known for some time that it was his intention to retire at the end of this term.

The only avowed candidate in the field at the present time is District Attorney James M. Swift of Fall River, who has been actively canvassing for support for months.

His friends in the legislature have been predicting his nomination and are at work making arrangements with other legislators in different sections of the state in his interest.

There is talk of Dist. Atty. Scott Peters of Essex county entering the contest, as there is also of District Atty. John J. Higgins of Somerville.

The refusal of Atty. Gen. Malone to again be a candidate removes the last western Massachusetts man from the present republican state ticket. To remedy this defect, it is said that the republican managers intend to see that A. P. Langtry, now a member of the legislature from Springfield, who has no love for Gov. Draper, is nominated for auditor at the state convention. This, it is thought, will pacify the western part of the state republicans.

ALL UP FOR THE DOWN RIVER BOULEVARD.

Lowell has a splendid opportunity to have a boulevard down the river as well as up the river. For many years past the people of this city have found the up river boulevard one of the most enjoyable resorts within their reach. They have always felt the want of a boulevard down the river on either side.

There is now an opportunity such as the city has never had before to have a state highway constructed from Lowell to Lawrence, a highway that will equal that between Lowell and Tyngsboro. It can be had also at an expense to Lowell that compared with the expense of constructing our city boulevard will be a mere bagatelle.

The state highway commission is ready to go to work on the construction of a splendid boulevard between Lowell and Lawrence, provided the necessary conditions be fulfilled by the abutting municipalities.

There is one obstacle in the way and one that should be quickly removed. The state highway will not macadamize or build any road except it has first been laid out in rough grade by the county and abutting towns.

There is a section of the proposed route that crosses private land along the tracks of the Boston and Northern street railway from Varnum's Landing to the old Lawrence road. This must be laid out and rough graded as a road before the state highway will touch it.

The county engineer has estimated the cost of grading the Middlesex county portion at $11,000. Of this the county will pay half. Lowell is asked to pay one-fourth and Dracut one-fourth. The expense to Lowell would be about $2700.

It is not too much to say that if this boulevard would cost our city $10,000 instead of the amount stated it should be paid. A boulevard down the river would be a splendid outlet for our people, a great source of pleasure and recreation fully as good as our city boulevard. This small sum should not deter the city council from authorizing the payment of our share of the expense and the endorsement of the scheme as already planned.

A great deal of money is expended on state highways and Lowell has not had a sufficient share of this money. We should have a boulevard on either side of the river between Lowell and Lawrence. Already there is a fine state highway connecting Lawrence and Haverhill, and the latter city has the benefit of two such highways on either side the river to Newburyport. It seems that the interests of Lowell in these matters have been neglected in the past.

Mayor Meehan has expressed himself in favor of this new boulevard, stating that Lowell will not hold back any public improvement by an unprogressive policy.

The road from the Lowell line to Varnum's Landing was laid out and built by the town of Dracut assisted by contributions from the abutters. The town of Methuen, we understand, has some hesitation in doing its part towards the laying out of this new section of road across private land. It is to be hoped that it will follow the example of Dracut in favoring all such improvements even though it cannot at all times afford the expense.

Here then is an opportunity to secure a splendid boulevard down the beautiful Merrimack valley, and one that should be promptly accepted.

There is a bill at present before the general court apportioning the expense of laying out this section of road between the counties of Middlesex and Essex, the city of Lowell and the town of Dracut. This measure should receive the support of all the Lowell representatives in the legislature. It is a matter of vast importance to our city, inasmuch as good roads are at the present time essential to travel and the bad roads are shunned by automobilists and others. The city that cannot be reached by good roads will be avoided. By the absence of boulevards between Lawrence and Lowell we have set up barriers to prevent people coming to our city. There is now an opportunity to have a state highway constructed on one side of the river. Let that opportunity be grasped as soon as possible. It will afterwards be in order to secure a boulevard on the other side the river. There is no reason why we should not have a state highway on the south side also. But one thing at a time. Let the state highway on the north side be first completed. The other will come in due time. Lowell should demand that the state highway commission spend more of its appropriation in the vicinity of Lowell.

The members of the common council apparently did not quite understand the proposition as it came before them at the last meeting. Let us hope the matter will be favorably acted upon without delay in order to show clearly that Lowell is not pursuing a dog-in-the-manger policy that may prevent a public improvement of the greatest importance to the cities and towns in this part of the state. Lowell should be a leader in all such movements and should not require to be urged into them by neighboring towns.

The state highway as already planned would enter Lowell by First street along the street railway tracks. In a year or two, however, a level road may be constructed along the river bank on the made land and joining the highway near the car barn. This road passing through the romantic "Indian Orchard" would lead to one of the most beautiful spots to be found in the whole course of the river. The so-called orchard could then be laid out as a public park, and as such would be of unrivaled beauty.

AN INJUDICIOUS POLICE BILL.

We do not believe the bill providing that a discharged police officer should have the right of appeal to the superior court for review should become law. It is wrong in principle, and the Massachusetts Police Relief association made a mistake in bringing it forward.

Such a law would destroy discipline and demoralize any police department. To pass such a bill would enable officers removed for just cause to hold up the acts of their superiors, pending an appeal to the superior court. It would thus block removal for cause rather than protect the officer against unjust removal, for a police board would hesitate to use its authority if its decision were to be the subject of long and expensive litigation.

A law of this kind would throw a lot of insignificant matters into the superior court now overcrowded with cases. It would be a confession of our inability to manage our police department. We have not arrived at that stage as yet.

The steady employees of other departments have just as good a right to seek a review by the court when discharged. It is the bane of any department to encourage or legalize insubordination. This law would have the same effect as political pull that leads a man to believe his superiors would not dare remove him and which has worked such demoralization in New York and other cities.

The aim of the law should be to aid discipline, not to destroy it. When police officers realize that they are working under the orders of a body that has power to discharge them for cause, they will be more attentive to duty.

Should any officer be discharged without sufficient cause, he can find a remedy in the courts without the aid of a new law. Besides, it is not creditable to a city to be carrying its affairs into court to be held up to the gaze of the entire country. Municipal boards are worthless unless they have absolute power to enforce their decrees. This is particularly and emphatically true of a police board which has to deal with a semi-military body of men.

SEEN AND HEARD

A young lady of our acquaintance is responsible for the statement that palmistry works splendidly as a starter when the young man is bashful.

There certainly would be something doing if Taft should fall flatter than a pancake.

It has been noted that light remarks often make heavy nights.

"Yesterday," says a man who is quoted by a contemporary, "a friend who heard that I sometimes suffered from insomnia told me of a sure cure. 'Eat a quart of peanuts and drink two or three glasses of milk before going to bed,' said he, 'and I'll warrant you'll be asleep within half an hour.' 'I did as he suggested,' the man proceeds, 'and now, for the benefit of others who may be afflicted with insomnia, I feel it to be my duty to report what happened to me. As far as I am this morning to recall the details. First, let me say that my friend was right. I did go to sleep very soon after I retired. Then a friend with his head under his arm came along and asked me if I wanted to buy his feet. I was negotiating with him when the door on which I was riding slipped out of his skin and left me floating in midair. While I was considering how to get down, a bull with two heads peered over the edge of the well and said he would haul me up if I would first climb up and rig a windlass for him.' 'So, as I was sliding up the mountain side, the brakeman came in, and I asked him when the train would reach my station. 'We passed your station four hundred and fifty years ago,' he said, calmly folding up the train and slipping it to his next stop. At this juncture the clown bounded into the ring and pulled the center pole out of the ground, lifting the tent and all the people in it up, while I stood on the earth below watching myself go out of sight among the clouds that floated on the ocean of time. 'Then I came to and found that I had been asleep almost three and one-half minutes.'"

The arrest of a hotel guest in Worcester the other day prompted a Brockton hotel manager to say: "I believe that the fellow who trimmed me up—the only one. He came here in 1908 and told me on the quiet he would stay three weeks. He was a general chub, and I was enough to create the impression that he had money to spare. Just before his first meal he came to the desk and asked to be introduced to the head waiter—wanted a seat at the star boarders' table, he said. Had a lot of talk about star boarders and all that sort of thing and kept up. 'Twice a day at least he kicked on the back of his head in his room, although we could find nothing the matter. The day before settling time he came to the desk and very impressively demanded that his room be warmed that night. He had a lot of letters to write and must be comfortable. 'That radiator must be fixed before I come back,' were his parting words. He hasn't come back since. I want to be honest, not so much for the coin he saved me as to explain to him about the radiator.' These hotel brats are numerous, but when they make a practice of going from town to town they get caught.

THE LAND OF YESTERDAY

Would you not seek the country town And green meadows nestled down If you could only find the way Into the Land of Yesterday?

How you would thrust the miles aside, Rush up the dear old lane, and then, Just where her roses laughed in pride, Stop and dream of the days long ago! You'd slip in quietly and wait Until she saw you by the gate, And then—read through a blur of tears Quick pardon for the selfish years.

This time, this life, you would not wait. This time, this time, you would not wait. For the brief wire that said "Too late!" If you could only find the way Into the Land of Yesterday, You wonder if her roses yet Lift up their heads and laugh with pride, And if her phlox and mignonette Have heart to blossom by their side; You wonder if the dear old lane Still shows its footprints after rain, And if the birds and hedges still Still rob her early cherry trees. You wonder if you went back now How everything would seem, and how— But no; not now; there is no way Back to the Land of Yesterday.

These should be owned and supported by the state, which would also supply the annual deficit. The poor and rich must unite, "workers with workers, manual and intellectual and work only for those that work for them, excluding thereby the drones and the parasites." The experiment was frustrated because

COMMUNICATIONS

Boston, Feb. 22, 1910.
Editor of The Sun, Lowell, Mass.
Dear Sir:—In your issue of the 21st there appeared a Boston dispatch reporting a meeting of the American Federation of Catholic Societies, in which it was stated that "One man holds out that Christian Science is injuring the cause of religion." Since this statement appears in company with various other charges, it seems proper to furnish a few facts in regard to what Christian Science really does.

I understand the term "religion" applies to the peculiar beliefs and practices, especially the latter, which one has chosen to embrace. We doubtless all agree that the creeds and dogmas of any religious denomination are of value only in so far as they contribute to the spiritual advancement of their devotees. Christian Science insists upon right doing; it insists upon the keeping of the sacraments in exact accord with the teaching of the scripture, regarding Jesus Christ as the exemplar.

In the formulation of her religious system Mrs. Eddy has taken the Bible for her guide, and she has faithfully adhered to its behests. Her teaching excludes all the evils which are mentioned by our Catholic friends, and includes all the virtues which the report recommends, and for this reason the Christian Science is an altogether improper classification of Christian Science has been made.

Yours very truly,
Alfred Farlow.

STATE HIGHWAY

estimated whether for or against the present bill to be careful and not misrepresent the situation, as the longer the townspeople were disunited just so long would this feeling work detriment to the town's interests as far as being recognized by either the state or county commissioners in their allotments for road and highway purposes.

Mr. Stevens stated that as a member of the roads and bridges committee he could not take sides in the present controversy on the highway proposition as he and the other members of that committee would have the evidence on the merits of the bill at the hearing on Monday.

The speaker stated that he had been represented as taking sides, but he firmly denied all such reports, and in conclusion said he was for the best interests of the town at all times, whether on highways or otherwise.

Rep. Holt's Remarks
Rep. Holt of Methuen was then introduced and in opening he stated that he was surprised that there should be the slightest opposition to the bill, so apparent was the necessity of the road and the benefits to be derived from it.

The speaker in explaining the bill as presented by him, stated that it called for the completion of the link of a highway that covered the entire distance from Franklin to Newburyport with the exception of that stretch provided for in the measure under consideration or extending over the so-called river road.

Mr. Holt outlined the previous attempts of Essex and Middlesex counties to complete or construct the river route road, and while both had finally agreed to do the work the attitude of both left much doubt as to when the work would be taken up. Should the county take up the work it would mean a greater expense to both Dracut and Methuen, both being assessable to the extent of 50 per cent. of the cost of the work.

Mr. Holt declared that his measure called for special legislation, which if passed, would mean the consideration of a state highway that would be maintained by the state while under the construction by the county the towns would be responsible for the maintenance. Under the county regime the towns would pay 50 per cent. and the present bill would only call for an assessment to the towns of about 15 per cent. each, while Lawrence and Lowell would stand to pay about 35 per cent. each.

Mr. Holt thought the bill was a great advantage for the towns while the road would connect the two great industrial cities of Lowell and Lawrence and would serve as the connecting link between Franklin and the sea.

The speaker thought the towns should be considerate of the request of the two cities for the construction of the road as both were now understood to favor it.

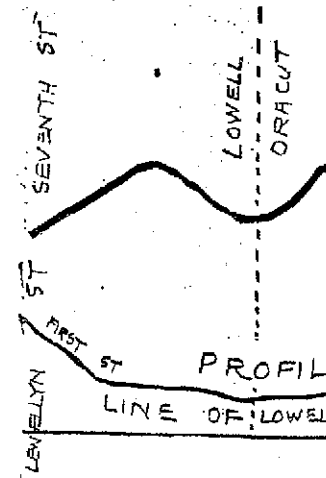

Bernice Parker asked Mr. Holt regarding the estimated cost of construction and when the representative stated about $10,000 this was taken exception to by Mr. Parker who said the county commissioner's engineer estimated the cost at $40,000 which would mean an expenditure of more than $50,000 by the towns. Mr. Holt retorted that even at $25,000 for construction the towns would not be assessed in excess of $5,000 on the percentage basis.

Mr. Parker thought it would take considerable time to renew bridges, culverts and retaining walls.

Mr. McManmon replied to Mr. Parker and stated that the Boston & Lowell Railroad Co. was now making arrangements to replace its bridges and make other improvements which would mean a big saving in the work. Mr. McManmon also made an appeal for justice in the matter, and in conclusion stated that he and other residents of the river road section would oppose any expenditure that would exceed $50,000. The speaker was given applause.

Oliver Coburn Protests
Oliver Coburn, the watch dog of the treasury, was there with a unique protest. He stated that if the road were constructed the state board of health would close it up in a few years as the Merrimack river is so polluted that people will be unable to walk along its banks. Mr. Coburn's remarks caused general laughter.

Mr. Dickey of Elmerville, replying to Mr. Coburn stated that there was some pretty healthy looking men with large and healthy families, notably the Profile sketch showing line of the proposed state highway, following line of the street railway to Lawrence. The portion from Belle Grove to the Dracut line, one mile and a quarter in length over private land is that which is to be rough graded by the county commissioners, Lowell to pay one-fourth the cost, Dracut one-fourth, the county one-half. The crooked line on top represents the old road from Methuen street to Lawrence. Essex county is to grade the portion from the Dracut line to the junction with the old Lawrence road as shown in the above sketch.

COL. ROOSEVELT

To be Given a Great Reception

GONDOKORO, Sudan, Feb. 26.—This was breaking-up day for the Smithsonian African scientific expedition, all of the porters and half of the servants returning to Kampala and Nairobi. Col. Roosevelt and Kermit Roosevelt, who were to return to Refat today, are expected here on the Belgian steamer tomorrow.

Col. Roosevelt's hunting party will leave again Monday for a shoot on Lake N, a body of water on the lower reaches of the Nile, which is so overgrown with weeds that its exact extent has never been determined. During this excursion the former president will be entertained by the governors of the Lado enclave and Mongalla province. Plans are being made to give an enthusiastic reception. Mongalla is being decorated with flags and the Belgian officials at Lado have made a giant American flag which will be flying high when the guests arrive. A dinner for Mr. Roosevelt's party will be given by the governor of Mongalla.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE
BOSTON, Feb. 26.—The commercial and industrial prosperity of New England and the advancement of general manufacturing interests through greater publicity were discussed at length by prominent business men before 500 members and guests at a banquet of the Boston chamber of commerce and the Pilgrim Publicity association last night.

Ernest J. Ridgeway, a New York publisher, in his subject on "Merchandizing by wireless," criticized New England business men for the methods they have used in their attempts to advance more rapidly than their brethren in other sections of the country. In his attack on the business principles Mr. Ridgeway said:

"While you are toying with figure puzzles for the betterment of your own business, and while the sky is full of signs, the first thing you will know the rest of the country will go off and leave you sitting on Plymouth Rock listening to the wild waves of the ocean saying, 'Oh, where is my wandering business tonight?'"

AN APPEAL

FROM THE DECISION OF JUDGE HOUGH

WASHINGTON, Feb. 26.—Reaching the conclusion that it is desirable that the questions involved be brought before the court of last resort, the cabinet yesterday reached an agreement that an appeal be taken by the department of justice from the decision of Judge Hough in the circuit court in New York in quashing for want of jurisdiction the charge of libel in connection with purchases of Panama canal property.

After this decision Attorney-General Wickersham telegraphed to District Attorney Wise at New York city to note an appeal. He was just in time, for yesterday was the last on which the government might avail itself of this privilege. The government all along has felt that an important issue was involved in the decision of Judge Hough in its effect on the enforcement of state penal laws in localities under federal jurisdiction. This is the real question involved, which the government desires the opinion of the highest court in the land. Irrespective of its effect in the present instance Mr. Wickersham said it might be far-reaching in other cases coming before the courts.

Mills

As was stated in these columns a week ago, the Massachusetts Cotton mills will not lose any time in starting work on their new buildings. The Merrimack Print Works closed for one week—Big Stir at Middlesex Mills.

The building will extend from the railroad tracks back of the Runcles building, across the canal and along East Merrimack street to the Concord river.

Give ear to what Fibre and Fabric, of even date, has to say about the Massachusetts mills.

"The Massachusetts mills of Lowell have adopted the right course in their plans for expansion, as explained last week, and owing to the fact that much Massachusetts mills stock is held by trustees, who do not feel justified in giving up rights has come into the market, and at present prices they are very attractive. The future of Massachusetts mills is so exceptionally bright that the shares anywhere under $30 are a good permanent investment.

With the changes and additions planned the earning capacity should increase in proportion to the increase in dividend requirement, owing to the $1,200,000 increase in capital, and there is the big Georgia plant that will some day be bonded to shareholders in the parent company as a present. The time is so short for taking up the new shares that prospective purchasers of rights must act quickly."

Four Per Cent Dividend

A dividend of 4 per cent is payable to the stockholders of the Massachusetts Cotton mills, Feb. 10, as of record Jan. 21.

Merrimack Mfg. Co.

The 2 1/2 per cent dividend on the preferred stock of the Merrimack Manufacturing Co. is payable March 1 to stock of record Jan. 15.

The Merrimack print works will be closed next week. The print works shut down last Thursday and will not open until one week from next Monday.

The Middlesex Mills

The Middlesex mills are running three shifts, one day shift and two night shifts. No sooner had it appeared in the newspapers that the Middlesex mills were running nights than spinners and weavers from all points of the compass flocked into Lowell and the result was, three men for every job. But the spinners and weavers are a happy lot, as a whole, and a little thing like a throw down when they ask for a job doesn't bother them.

THOMPSON BACK

Revenue Collector Resumes Old Position

Aaron S. Thompson, who recently resigned his position as deputy collector of internal revenue for the district of Lowell, has been reappointed to accept a position with the C. B. Coburn Co., was reappointed to the federal position this week, having resigned from the Coburn company after a brief experience.

Mr. Thompson has always been used to outside work and he found the confinement of the indoor position at Coburn's detrimental to his health, and hence resigned.

Since his resignation from the federal position not only Congressman Ames but the members of the local legislative delegation have been besieged by the friends of the candidates for the position, and the announcement that Mr. Thompson is to return to the federal job will come as a big surprise to the hustling candidates, while Congressman Ames will be permitted to breathe easy again. Ex-Rep. Charles F. Varum was prominently mentioned as a candidate for the position.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Feb. 26.—Mrs. W. H. Guinness locked her unruly ten-year-old boy, Gerald S. Guinness, in an upper room of her house on Sexton street this afternoon while she went to a store. Later Medical Examiner Griffin viewed the remains and pronounced death due to an accident. The boy's mother is grief-stricken.

PRES. MURPHY PINCHOT'S STORY

Of Philadelphia Central Labor Union
Held in $3000

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 26.—The beginning of the second week of the strike against the Philadelphia Rapid Transit Co. finds the city authorities apprehensive of what today and tomorrow may develop in spite of the great gains toward the complete re-establishment of order made in the last two days. Today is a half holiday in many of the industrial plants whose employees are strongly in sympathy with the strikers and the ability of the police to control crowds is expected to be again severely tested. Last Sunday proved to be the hardest day on the police of any during the strike.

The arrest of John J. Murphy, the young president of the Central Labor union, who was given a hearing today on the charge of inciting a riot, has added to the uneasiness in labor circles. The warrant for Murphy's arrest was issued by the direction of Director of Public Safety Clay, following the publication in an afternoon paper of the following statement, said to have been made by the head of the Central Labor union.

"You can depend upon it that by Sunday's meeting a general strike will be called. If one man is shot in Kensington there will follow a carnival of riot and bloodshed which will startle the entire country. I should not care to be responsible for such an outbreak. The state police would be helpless; I want it understood that there are men in the northeast who can shoot as straight as any trooper who ever drew breath. Just wait a little while for developments and you will see something which will open your eyes."

"This statement was made to newspaper reporters for publication," said Director Clay, "one of whom was sent for and who stated that the above statement of Mr. Murphy's as published is substantially correct. I have been advised by the law officers of the city and county that the same is a violation of law and inciting to riot, and therefore it is my duty as director of public safety to place him under arrest."

Murphy denied that he had made such a statement for publication. He says that he merely expressed an opinion as to what might develop if the strike continues and the company refuses to arbitrate. The published statement itself, he says, shows that a warning and not a threat was intended. Like Pratt, who was denied bail when arrested on a similar charge a few days ago, Murphy was not locked in a cell over night, but was permitted to enter bail before a friendly magistrate for a hearing today.

The flat refusal of the board of directors of the Rapid Transit Co. to entertain a proposition for arbitration leads many to believe that the contest between the company and the union will continue until one or the other surrenders. The committee of prominent clergymen who proposed the arbitration plan will hold another meeting to consider what further move, if any, shall be made.

Compared with yesterday there was noticeable change in the early hours of the day in the matter of street car facilities. Cars were operated under police protection on nearly all the lines. Two or three lines, the company claims, are being run with nearly the full number of cars. The strikers are continuing their picket work and here and there gain recruits to their ranks. The transit company asserts it can put more cars in operation if the city would furnish the protection.

The menace of a general sympathetic strike still hangs over the city. President Murphy of the Central Labor union says he fully expects the Central body at its regular meeting tomorrow to endorse such a move. He would not pretend whether all trades unions in the city would join in a walkout.

John J. Murphy, president of the Central Labor union, arrested last night charged with inciting to riot, was arraigned today and held in $3000 bail.

MORE RIOTING

WARRANT FOR HEAD OF CENTRAL LABOR UNION

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 26.—Following the publication of a statement alleged to have been made by John J. Murphy, president of the Central Labor union that "a general strike should be called immediately, I think it is inevitable. There are men in the northeast who can shoot as straight as any trooper who ever drew a breath," a warrant was issued last night for the labor leader charging him with "inciting to riot."

The remarks on which the warrant for Murphy's arrest were based were said to have been made by him after the announcement that at a special meeting of the board of directors of the Philadelphia Rapid Transit company, the request for arbitration submitted by the committee of prominent clergymen had been declined.

Riots in West Philadelphia and in the southern section of the city followed the running of cars after dark last night in those localities. Three cars west bound on South street were held by an obstruction at the east end of the drawbridge over the Schuylkill river. A crowd of men and boys showered bricks, stones and pieces of food at the motormen, conductors and policemen who were guarding the cars.

A policeman on guard at a nearby power house, however, came to the rescue and with drawn revolver forced his way through the crowd and succeeded in dragging the injured men to the powerhouse. When fifty bluecoats reached the scene the crowd had dispersed, leaving the cars badly wrecked.

Other riots were reported at both and Market streets and in several other sections of West Philadelphia.

Director of Public Safety Clay said in an interview that the strike is now merely a memory. He also issued orders forbidding the use of wagons which have been doing a thriving business hauling to and from work persons who would not risk themselves to ride on the cars while the temper of the strike sympathizers was at fever heat. At the meeting of the board of directors of the Philadelphia Rapid Transit Co. yesterday, it was decided that any strikers whose previous record was good, would be taken back by the company provided he applied for his position before March 1. A reply was made to the committee of clergymen politely but firmly refusing to submit to the proposed arbitration. This attitude of the company caused a renewal of the plans for a sympathetic strike.

C. O. Pratt, the organizer of the car men, who has been opposing this plan said:

"The street car strike has ceased to become a local issue. It is now a national one. The state and the American Federation stand by to give whatever support is deemed necessary. The strike will be won."

The Clear Makers' union yesterday adopted resolutions of sympathy with the street car men and pledged moral and financial support.

EIGHTH DAY OF STRIKE

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 26.—The feature of the eighth day of the Philadelphia street railroad strike was the arrest and arraignment of John J. Murphy, president of the Central Labor union, on a charge of inciting a riot through a newspaper interview. He was taken into custody in the early hours of the morning and after a brief hearing at the city hall police station at 11 a. m. was released in $3000 bail, which was furnished.

Three newspapermen reluctantly admitted, after much cross examination, that Murphy uttered the words attributed to him in the newspaper on which they are employed. In this interview Murphy referred to the mayor as a puppet, and said that if one man was shot by the police a carnival of riot and bloodshed will follow which will startle the country. The magistrate asked Murphy if he had ever been arrested before. Murphy hesitated, and before he could reply police records were produced which showed that he had been arrested several years ago on a charge of selling policy. At this juncture Murphy interrupted the proceedings to say that he had not understood the magistrate's question and admitted

WASHINGTON, Feb. 26.—Gifford Pinchot, taking the witness stand at the Ballinger-Pinchot inquiry this afternoon, read a statement to the committee before being sworn in which he charged Secretary Ballinger with falsehood and disloyalty to President Taft and declared that Secretary Ballinger should be dismissed from the service.

Mr. Pinchot made to the Ballinger-Pinchot investigating committee this statement of his charges against Secretary Ballinger.

"What I desire to lay before the committee is a consecutive story of my experiences with Mr. Ballinger in relation to the conservation of natural resources. Among several other matters there are three of principal importance to be called to your attention. The first of these concerns the policy devised and inaugurated by the last administration of protecting against monopolistic control the water-power sites owned by the president. I shall show you that Secretary Ballinger entered his office with the clear determination to make short work of that policy; that he reversed it so far as he was allowed to do so; that he restored the power sites to entry without the remotest idea of re-withdrawing them, and that, finally, when I charged him last autumn to the president with being an enemy of the policy of conservation he capped the climax by giving to the president himself an explanation of his conduct that was essentially false.

"The second has to do with my connection as a government officer with the Cunningham coal cases and with the Glavis charges. I shall show you how the forest service became involved in these cases and how Glavis submitted his facts to me. I believe then, as I believe now, that he told the truth.

"I am convinced that Glavis was a faithful public servant, and that the facts which he presented prove that Mr. Ballinger has been unfaithful to his trust as a servant of the people and as the guardian of public property of enormous value.

"I shall show you that since I learned the facts you have heard from Glavis and others which I am about to lay before you, I have acted steadily in the light of them as it was my duty, both as a public officer and as a citizen. I shall show you that in pursuance of that duty I laid before the president, both by word of mouth and in a letter of Nov. 4, a statement of my conviction that Secretary Ballinger has been a dangerous enemy to conservation.

"I shall show you that this letter was submitted by the president to Mr. Ballinger and that as part of his reply he laid before the president a statement concerning the Cunningham coal cases which statement is shown by indisputable documentary evidence to be absolutely false in three essential particulars. It will then appear that Mr. Ballinger willfully deceived the president and was disloyal to him.

"The third principal matter is concerned with the attitude of this government in law and administrative practice toward the conservation of the natural resources belonging to the people. I desire to show you that the story of Glavis' courageous and successful fight to protect the property of the people which ended in his dismissal without a hearing is but a single chapter in the history of the public lands. I shall show you that under our present law and practice the more difficult task falls on those who would protect the public property and not on those who would despoil it and that under the present system the betrayal into monopolistic control of what belongs to all of us is made easy and often, in practice, inevitable.

"Your duty toward this country is not only to get rid of an unfaithful public servant. A far more greater duty is to bring about a fundamental change in the law and practice toward conservation to prevent in the future what has been in the past the almost inevitable sacrifice of the public welfare and to make possible hereafter the utilization of natural resources and the natural advantages for the benefit of all the people instead of merely for the profit of a few.

"When this story has been told and the witnesses whom I shall ask you to call have been heard, you will realize that the interests of the people are not safe in the hands of Mr. Ballinger and that the country will demand of this committee a verdict in harmony with the general conviction that the secretary of the interior has been unfaithful both to the public whose property he has endangered and to the president, whom he has deceived."

At this juncture Murphy interrupted the proceedings to say that he had not understood the magistrate's question and admitted that he had been arrested, but had been discharged.

Asst. Dist. Atty. Gray, in pleading to the magistrate to hold Murphy in heavy bail, called attention to present conditions in the city and declared that the utterances of Murphy were serious enough to hold him on the charge of inciting to riot.

Murphy's counsel denied that Murphy had committed any offense, and asked for his client's discharge. The magistrate, however, held him for the action of the grand jury.

After the hearing, Murphy said: "I stand for everything the newspaper man said. I have nothing to take back and that can go to their limit on what I said."

Conditions were very quiet through the city up to noon, nothing beyond the scattered stoning of cars being reported from anywhere. The transit company says it is operating more cars on their strike leaders report the situation as satisfactory to them.

MILITARY HONORS

Col. Thos. Talbot

Thomas Talbot have not been completed as yet, owing to the absence of the family in New York, who have gone to accompany the remains back to Boston, but it has been decided to hold a military funeral from the Arlington street church in Boston, probably Monday noon, and the remains will then be brought to this city for the funeral at the family lot in the Lowell cemetery.

LOOKING UP COLEMAN'S ACCOUNTS

BOSTON, Feb. 26.—The searchlight of investigation upon the tangled financial affairs of George W. Coleman, late book-keeper of the National City bank which closed its doors on Wednesday with a deficit of at least $160,000 and for which Coleman is held responsible, was turned on full force today. Receiver John L. Bates and Bank Examiner Pepper have a definite idea on the method of procedure and have already received 500 of the 800 pass books of the depositors. Without promising an immunity both Receiver Bates sent word to Coleman that his assistance in straightening out the accounts would be appreciated, but no immediate reply was received. The criminal side of the case occupied the attention of both the federal and city authorities and Chief Harney of the Cambridge force intimated today that he might follow up the numerous rumors that Coleman used the bank's money in an effort to break a fur bank. The chief went so far as to say that he had secured the names of a number of Boston sporting men with whom Coleman associated during the past year.

Receiver Bates stated today that the $30,000 in securities which he carried away from the bank yesterday was slightly more than the amount shown to be in the bank's vaults in the last report of the bank's deficits on other accounts.

IN POLICE COURT

Boston Man Fined for Stealing Trousers

Lawrence Quirk, of Boston, who stole two pairs of trousers at the Rutnam & Sons Co. clothing store in Central street last Saturday night, was arraigned in police court this morning on a charge of larceny, and through his counsel, Lawyer John Quinn, of Boston, entered a plea of guilty, was found guilty and ordered to pay a fine of $15 within five days or be committed to the Lowell jail for three months.

Lawyer Quinn, who is known in and about Boston as "Tongue John," informed the court that the young man was a member of a highly respectable family in Boston, but had started to drink of late and that the larceny was committed while he was in an intoxicated condition and not in full control of his senses.

He told the court that he thought if a fine were imposed it would be sufficient to cause his client to realize the seriousness of the offense and he felt that the young man would do better in the future.

Supt. Welch informed the court that he had communicated with the police of Boston and that he had no record in that city. Questioned by the court Quirk said that about ten or twelve years ago he was arrested in Boston for malicious mischief.

After sentence was passed, Lawyer Quinn paid the fine and Quirk was allowed to go.

Neglected His Children
Adolph Volkereyk pleaded guilty to a complaint charging him with failing to provide proper support for his two minor children, Paul and Margaret. Mrs. Volkereyk said that she left her husband about three years ago, owing to his habits and that since then she had been working in the mill and supporting the little ones.

The defendant said that he was willing to support his children if his wife would relinquish her claim to them and allow him to have them. This she refused to do, however, and the court felt that the children would receive better care from the mother than the father.

Volkereyk was found guilty and ordered to pay $1 a week to his wife.

Threatened His Wife
Napoleon Champagne pleaded guilty to threatening his wife and was given a suspended sentence of four months in jail. He was represented by Lawyer Paul R. Charbonneau and Lawyer J. H. Guillet appeared for the government.

Case Continued
The case of Michael Nowacki, charged with assault and battery on Victor H. J. Belle Isle was continued till next Thursday.

Paul Mullin, charged with being drunk, was fine $5.

CHICAGO, Feb. 26.—Charles R. Bean, the wealthy commission merchant of Portland, Me., who was found yesterday at 11:30 a. m. in a car at a mysterious absence from home of nearly a month will be taken back to Portland tonight or tomorrow. The city detective bureau received a telegram today from Chief of Police Dwyer of that city requesting the Chicago authorities to look for Bean in any way in which they could. The telegram was said to have been sent at the request of relatives of the missing man. When discovered yesterday, Bean was working as a chauffeur and was apparently unable to give any account of his wanderings since he left home on Jan. 31.

DARING ESCAPE Of Prisoners Who Were Arrested in Lowell

Men Sawed Iron Bars in Hillsboro, N. H. and Escaped in Light Clothing—They Are Still at Large

Joseph Beauregard of Nashua, who broke into a store in Wilton, N. H., during the latter part of November of last year was arrested by Inspector John A. Walsh and Patrolman Matthew McCann a few days later in this city; Herbert L. Quimby, who escaped from Grasmere and was later arrested here by Inspector Martin A. Maher and Patrolman Bart Ryan on December 18th, together with Patrick Brown of Manchester, yesterday made a most daring escape from the prison dormitory of the Hillsboro, N. H. county house of correction at Grasmere and are still at large.

The police within a radius of 50 miles of Manchester have been notified of the escape, but at the present writing the men were still at large.

With the mercury standing at 24 degrees below zero, the three men, who had crawled through, and then, thinly clad, saved their way out of the prison and fled through the snow to the railroad tracks leading to Manchester, making good their escape. One of the men, Beauregard, was handcuffed with a pig leg, but succeeded in escaping, and the other two were on the track of the prisoners shortly after they made their escape.

Long Term Men

All three were long term men. Beauregard was committed to jail for a year for breaking and entering a clothing store in Wilton, N. H., the latter part of November; Brown was committed in December to serve nine months for drunkenness; and Quimby, who was committed in December to complete a six months' term for drunkenness, only a few days of which had been served, and a month additional for escaping from Grasmere last May.

Sensational Escape

The escape was one of the most sensational in the history of the institution. With a saw improvised from a steel table knife, notched with the aid of another knife, the men sawed off two iron bars five-eighths of an inch in diameter, bent back the bars so that they could crawl through, and then lowered themselves to the ground with a rope made of bedclothing. They then ran to the railroad track and hurried towards Manchester.

The men occupied a dormitory on the second floor of the prison building which stands beside the stable and near the railroad track. In the old-fashioned prison building—to replace which the legislature made an appropriation last spring, but which is still being used because the steel work for the new building has not yet arrived—the men are not kept in cells, but are herded in dormitories. Eighteen other men occupied the apartment from which the trio escaped, but refused to leave their warm cots and engage in the folly of escaping on such a night.

They claimed afterwards that they knew nothing about the escape until the watchmen discovered it and came in to investigate, but the statement was received with skepticism by the officers of the institution, who have listened to prisoners' tales before and who have no doubt that the prisoners own say the men sawing out and kept silent through sympathy. Most of the other prisoners in the room were serving shorter terms and they may have felt that the period of liberty they had gained by running away was not worth the extra month which they might lose for if they should be caught and brought back.

The break was discovered at 1:45 a. m. by Night Watchman George Rand, who makes a round of the buildings hourly. He passes the prison twice on each round, first passing it at fifteen minutes before the hour, and then on his return at ten minutes before the hour. Everything appeared all right at 1:45, but when next he came around he saw the door of the building hanging from the second story window of the prison, and investigation showed that three men were missing.

Search Instituted

Officers of the institution at once started out with lanterns and found the tracks of the men in the loose snow in the rear of the building. They were easily followed, as Beauregard's pig leg made a distinct mark in the snow. The trail was followed for some distance towards Manchester, but it was evident that the men had made all the haste possible in getting away, and they were not once sighted. The length of the strides showed that the men had run part of the way to keep themselves from freezing, as well as to get beyond reach of their pursuers.

As far as could be ascertained from an investigation yesterday the men had no extra clothing and must have suffered bitterly from the cold, if they were not actually frostbitten. Whether they found refuge with friends in town or jumped a freight train and got out of the city can only be conjectured. While they may have had outside help, and have been provided with clothing and shelter, there is no proof to show it.

The thermometer showed a temperature of 24 degrees below zero at the county farm at the time the men escaped, and although warmly clothed with overcoats, caps and gloves, the officers who pursued the fugitives suffered severely from the cold. They half expected to find the prisoners overcome by the cold and freezing when they tracked them toward the city. The men did not even take the jumpers and overalls worn as the prison uniform and had only ordinary jackets and trousers of light weight over their underclothing, light weight caps without earflaps, or outside. They were without mittens or gloves unless they got some garments outside from some source unknown to the officers.

Arrested in Lowell

Beauregard's escape, crippled as he was with a pig leg, which made walking doubly difficult in the snow, is regarded as the most desperate. He is one of the gang which broke into a clothing store at Wilton last fall and got away with a wagon load of clothing and other goods. In the complete amount of goods stolen was set at $219.55, but most of the goods were bulky. Another of the gang, Philip Boudreau, was sentenced to state prison, but Beauregard was let off with a year at Grasmere, in view of his past good record.

Quimby, who escaped once before, was captured in Lowell last December. It is suspected that he was the ring-leader in yesterday morning's break.

Beauregard and Boudreau were arrested in this city by Inspector Walsh and Patrolman McCann during the early part of December. The police had considerable difficulty in locating the clothing stolen, but finally located the room where the goods were and succeeded in recovering nearly everything that had been taken.

Quimby Before the Local Court

Quimby's first appearance in the Lowell court was during the early part of December of last year when he was found guilty of stealing a pair of shoes. His young wife appeared in his behalf and after making a strong plea for clemency for her husband Judge Hadley imposed a small fine and he was allowed to go.

Though the police did not know it at the time he was before the court, Quimby was after escaping from Grasmere and was wanted by the New Hampshire authorities. A week or more later a description of Quimby was sent to Lowell and he was arrested by Inspector Maher and Patrolman Ryan and turned over to the New Hampshire officials.

FOR STATE HIGHWAY

Dracut Citizens Boomed the Proposed Road At a Largely Attended and Practically Unanimous Meeting Last Evening—Situation Explained by Rep. Holt of Methuen

That the people of Dracut are practically a unit for the proposed state highway from Lowell to Lawrence, along the north bank of the Merrimack river was demonstrated last evening when a mass meeting of the citizens of that town to discuss the project drew one of the largest crowds ever seen at a special meeting.

The principal speaker of the evening was Rep. Holt of Methuen, the "father" of the bill, and explained the matter in lucid and convincing manner, and when he had finished and had answered the questions put to him there was little opportunity left for opposition.

Lowell men presented a petition for the new road to the executive committee of the board of trade yesterday morning, and that committee, after deciding upon $3000 as all that they could advise Lowell's spending on it, voted to favor the project and to be represented before the hearing on Monday. The estimated cost as given by the county engineer shows that Lowell's share of the expense will be under $2000.

Chairman Fred A. Bassett of the selectmen presided over the hearing and stated the purpose of the gathering. He called attention to the presence of Rep. George H. Stevens of Dracut and Rep. Holt of Methuen, both of whom would speak to the meeting relative to the bill and legislation now pending.

Chairman Bassett introduced Rep. Stevens, who stated that his brother representative was better able to explain the merits of the matter to be discussed, as the Methuen representative had named and presented the bill which covered the project of a state highway over the river route, so-called.

Mr. Stevens asked the parties interested to favor the project and to be

WOMAN ARRESTED

She is Charged With the Murder of Her Husband

KIRKSVILLE, Mo., Feb. 26.—Mrs. Alma Proctor Vaughn was arrested this forenoon on a warrant charging her with the murder of her husband, Prof. John T. Vaughn. She was released on $25,000 bonds.

Mrs. Vaughn went to the office of Sheriff Williams and surrendered at 8:40 o'clock. During a twenty minute wait while her attorneys were consulting she sat in the sheriff's office and at 9 o'clock she went into the circuit court. Judge Shelton told her she was charged with first degree murder. She replied with a nod of her head. She was calm until she was told to stand up and swear she would appear in court when summoned. Then she broke down and wept and after taking the oath she sank into her chair.

James S. Scott, her uncle, J. M. Proctor, Jr., her brother, and J. K. Yowell of Monroe City, qualified as bondsmen, swearing their aggregate wealth was in excess of $150,000. The attorney, W. Rosland, asked the court to set the hearing, but Judge Shelton said it could not be before the May term of court.

AUGUST BELMONT A NEW THEATRE

Gets License to Wed Miss Robson

NEW YORK, Feb. 26.—It was learned today that the marriage license bureau in the city hall had been kept open after hours last night for the issuance of a marriage license to August Belmont and Eleanor Eliza Robson, the actress, whose engagement was recently announced.

Mr. Belmont made the arrangement by telephone, but did not inform Chief Clerk Scully of his identity. Consequently the appearance of Mr. Belmont and Miss Robson, who motored down to the city hall, took the clerk by surprise. Because of the late hour, there were few persons about the bureau and the pair were not recognized by outsiders.

In the application for the license, which was issued in due form, Mr. Belmont gave his age as 57, while Miss Robson's was given as 21. The time and place of the marriage was not stated.

NEW SHORTSTOP

Has Been Signed for Lowell Team

Hammond Ordway of Boston, a 19-year-old shortstop, formerly with the Millinocket team of the Maine league, whose services have been sought by Billy Hamilton, Jesse Burkett, Mickey Vernon of the Waterbury club and Manager Cavanaugh of the Western league, has asked his signature to a Lowell contract and will be seen in a Lowell uniform. Ordway's contract completes the team.

REP. PERKINS IMPROVED
WASHINGTON, Feb. 26.—The condition of Representative James Perkins of Rochester, N. Y., showed some improvement today.

COL. ABERCROMBIE RETIRED
WASHINGTON, Feb. 26.—Col. William Abercrombie, 25th infantry, upon his own application, has been retired from active service to take effect June 15 next after more than 33 years' service.

Col. Abercrombie recently became involved in some disagreement with General Bliss, commanding the department of the Columbia, in regard to the manner of his administration at Fort Wright, Wash., which resulted in Abercrombie's being relieved from the command of that post.

EIGHT STOREKEEPERS

Have Been Ordered to Appear in Court

The proprietors of eight small stores in this city have been summoned to appear in police court on Monday morning upon complaint of Supt. Redmond Welch of the police department. The specific charge against each one is "keeping open his shop on the Lord's Day."

The following is a list of storekeepers notified to be in court: Michael Jordan, 123 Allen street; Max Goldman, 89 Chalmers street; William Suker, 23 Thorndike street; Nicholas Zantubos, 134 Middlesex street; Peter Theodoris, 1 Salem street; Michael Asoriano, 23 Lakeview avenue; Peter Eleopoulos, 591 Broadway and Ahamed Hamdy, 275 Middlesex street.

According to section two, chapter 423 of the Acts of 1909 the board of police has the power to grant licenses to reputable persons who on secular days are retail dealers of ice cream, confectionery, soda water and fruit to keep open their place of business on the Lord's day for the sale of the above mentioned articles.

Now many of the storekeepers have failed to take out licenses and have been enjoying the same privileges that the bona fide licensed keepers have. Last Sunday it is understood that several numbers of the police department, in plain clothes, visited a number of the stores and made purchases. In whatever places purchases were made, the proprietors will appear in court.

According to section two of chapter 98 of the Revised Laws the proprietor of an unlicensed store, who makes sales on the Lord's day is liable to a fine not exceeding $50. The law reads as follows:

"Whoever on the Lord's day, keeps open his shop, warehouse or workhouse, or does any manner of labor, business or work except works of necessity and charity, or takes part in any sport, game, play or public diversion, except a concert of sacred music or an entertainment given by a religious or charitable society, the proceeds of which, if any, are to be devoted exclusively to a charitable or religious purpose, shall be punished by a fine of not more than $50 for each offence; and that the proprietor, manager or person in charge of such game, sport, play or public diversion, except as aforesaid, shall be punished by a fine of not less than fifty nor more than five hundred dollars for each offence."

ELECTRICIAN BURNS IS AT WORK ON THE TEST BOARD

Electrician Michael Burns of the police department and his assistant, Joseph McDevitt, have been busy engaged for the past few days in cleaning up the test board in the telegraph room at the police station. The levers, contacts and various brass fixtures are being removed, cleaned and polished.

The fittings of two circuits are taken out at a time, but the work of cleaning does not in any way interfere with or impair the service of the telegraph system.

The test board was installed about ten years ago and is now undergoing its first thorough cleaning. When the work is completed it will be but one of the many difficult pieces of work that Electrician Burns has performed in connection with the police telegraph system.

MYSTERY TABLE

FOR COMING FAIR WAS GIVEN BOOST LAST EVENING

An entertainment in aid of the mystery table for the coming Grace Universalist fair to be held at the Highland club March 11, was given in the church vestry last night. There were fourteen tableaux altogether, as follows: "The Knitted Sweater," Miss Helen Spencer; "Karo Corn," Leslie Pullen; "Packer's Tar Soap," Marjory and Stuart Murphy; "Kingsford's Corn Starch," Dorothy Harris; "Hind's Almond Cream," Miss Clara Shay; "Jap Rose Soap," Miss Marie Richardson; "Teat-Eyes," Miss William Murphy; "Gulfara Soap," Miss Felicia White; "Pearline," Miss Gertrude Weinbeck; "Old Dutch Cleanser," Miss Linda Weinbeck; "Baker's Chocolate," Miss Carlotta Abels; "Jello," Miss Olga Shay; "Red Cross Nurse," Miss Marion Martin; and "Unedea Biscuits," Stuart Murphy.

During the intermission Miss Mina Brooks gave readings, and Miss Ella Perham played the piano. The closing part of the entertainment was devoted to the title one act comedy entitled "The Truth About Jane." The cast of characters was: "Jane," Dorothy Harris; "Berger," Leslie Pullen. A candy table did a thriving business.

FINE GIFTS

FOR JOSEPH M. DONOGHUE LAST EVENING

A genuine surprise and presentation of gifts was accorded Mr. Joseph M. Donoghue at his home, 4 Hazeltine street last evening when a party of 40 of his young friends called to tender him a farewell reception. Mr. Donoghue is to assume an important clerical position in the census bureau of the department of commerce and labor at Washington on March 1 and hence the gathering at his home. When the gathering arrived Miss Florence Kane presented in a few well-chosen words an elegant watch and gold chain to Mr. Donoghue. Mr. John P. Quinn, with appropriate remarks, presented a dress suit case. Mr. Donoghue spoke briefly in appreciation of the gifts saying he would never forget the donors. There were piano solos by Mr. Thomas O'Hare, John A. Quinn, Joseph Donohue and John J. Gilbride, Jr., and songs by Miss Margaret J. O'Donoghue, Miss Mary Dunn, Thomas O'Hare, Miss Annabel McLaughlin, Miss May Barry, Miss Gertrude Holden and Miss Ethel Rowland. Recitations were given by Arthur Cull and William J. O'Donoghue. Refreshments were served. The party broke up at a seasonable hour, wishing every success to Mr. Donoghue in his new field of work.

NO WAGE INCREASE

NEW YORK, Feb. 26.—Representatives of the eastern railroads which have been asked by their employees for an increase of wages announced yesterday that in the face of a steady advance in the cost of operation and a steady decline in rates, they were unable to grant general wage increases. In addition to these already made, they take the position that there were general increases in 1908 and 1907, with no subsequent decline during the panic of 1907, as was the case in many other industries.

The railroads repeat their familiar argument that, whereas rates have decreased, everything that the railroads have increased in price.

Statistics are quoted showing that the average wage of employees of the railroads is $3008 a year as against less than $500 in 78 other industries employing skilled labor.

No statement was forthcoming last night from employees.

BRITISH CABINET

Will Try to Limit Lords' Veto Power

LONDON, Feb. 26.—The Daily Telegraph asserts that the cabinet has abandoned all idea of reforming the house of lords, and will now direct its whole energies to limiting the veto power of the lords. In this, the Telegraph says the government will proceed by bill, may by resolution first and bill afterwards, as originally intended. This concession to the radicals will not satisfy the Radicals, the paper thinks, because the ministers have not yet decided to put the veto question before the budget.

The Radical Chronicle partly confirms the foregoing by stating that the government resolutions will deal with the veto, leaving the question of the reform of the house of lords for future consideration.

TEXTILE SCHOOL

ANNUAL DANCE OF GAMA CHAPTER AT COLONIAL HALL

Colonial hall was the scene of a very delightful party last night of the annual dance of the Gama chapter of the Phi Psi fraternity of the textile school. The affair was largely attended by members and friends of the organization and there were many guests present from out of town.

The hall was prettily decorated, the fraternity colors, black and yellow, predominating. A large replica of the fraternity pin, done in electric lights and hung over the center of the stage, was the hub of the scheme.

Hilbard's orchestra furnished music and at intermission refreshments were served. The patronesses who occupied a cosy corner of the hall were: Mrs. A. G. Cinnick, Mrs. Harry Polard, Mrs. L. W. Fuller, Mrs. Stephen B. Smith, Mrs. Arthur A. Stewart, Mrs. Fenwick Empey.

The reception committee was: Mr. George Cogswell Welch, Mr. Carl E. Bailey, Mr. Kurt Huegel, Mr. Andrew S. Waterman, Mr. John H. Hutton. The active members of the local chapter are: Irving N. Stonach, Ernest C. Hay, Albert A. Hodgkins, Everett B. Rich, Woodbury K. Howe, Harold G. Nicholson, John H. Hutton, Kurt Huegel, Alfred Walker, Norman B. Reed, Carl E. Bailey, George Cogswell Welch, Henry H. Harrison, James S. Goodwin, William W. Watson, Walter E. Kehew, Howard M. Baileie, Samuel McCleary, Ralph B. Clark, Andrew Waterman, Leopoldo Hernandez, Jr., Prescott F. Bigelow, Philip H. G. Smith, J. Fred T. Phillips, Walter C. Contry, Miles E. Rogers, Edwin M. Crane.

THE BIG BOUT

May Not Take Place in 'Frisco

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 26.—That it is by no means certain yet that the Jeffries-Johnson fight will be staged in or around San Francisco became known last night, when it was learned that negotiations are about to be reopened with Salt Lake City with a view to conducting the big battle there. The promoters of the fight have not met with the reception they had hoped for and that they are not entirely agreed as to the course to pursue has become apparent and thus vent in various rumors and counter rumors between Rickard and Jack Gleason and intimations that extortionate demands are made for a place for an arena. Last night it was said that Rickard, becoming dissatisfied, had reopened negotiations with Salt Lake City. Rickard's denial notwithstanding, it was learned that representatives from Salt Lake would be here in a day or two, among them J. Langford, manager of the Salt Air pavilion, who is coming in response to a telegram from Rickard. While not denying that matters were not entirely satisfactory, neither promoter would make a statement.

MAY USE AMPHITHEATRE
SALT LAKE CITY, Utah, Feb. 26.—In response to a telegram from Tex Rickard asking a further conference concerning the use of the Salt Air amphitheatre for the Jeffries-Johnson fight, J. E. Langford, manager of the Salt Air company left for San Francisco last night.

THOMAS F. WALSH, SICK "MINING KING," AND THE $100,000,000 BABY HEIR

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., Feb. 26.—With Thomas F. Walsh, the mine owner of Colorado and Washington, D. C., who is ill here, having come from Palm Beach, Fla., by the advice of his physicians, is his only child, Mrs. Edward Beale McLean, with her husband and her baby son. The baby has been called "the $100,000,000 baby" in view of the fact that he is heir to the fortunes of two immensely wealthy grandfathers, Thomas F. Walsh and John R. McLean. It is not thought that the combined fortunes of the two men would reach the figure given, but there is no doubt that each of them possesses an enormous pile of wealth. The McLean baby is named Vinson Walsh McLean, and he is ten weeks old. His mother was formerly Miss Evelyn Walsh. The only other child of Mr. and Mrs. Walsh, was killed in 1906 in the automobile accident in which his sister was seriously injured. John R. McLean, paternal grandfather of the baby, is the owner of the Cincinnati Enquirer and the Washington Post.

TWO STAR HORSE PILOTS IN THE PUBLIC EYE AT PRESENT

NEW YORK, Feb. 26.—With the opening of horse racing only a short way off owners of thoroughbreds are now on the scout for good riding material. In fact, the dearth of first class horse pilots is causing the owners of thoroughbreds in this country considerable worry. Some years ago there was a wealth of riding material, the large salaries commanded by many pigskin artists acting as an incentive to make many youngsters take up this method of making a livelihood, but racing has been practically dead in several states, and the small salaries being offered have caused a big falling off in the apprentices. At present there are about seven jockeys worthy of mention—Powers, Butwell, Garner, Dugan, Need, Shilling and Archibald. Considering that at least twelve first class riders are needed here to make good and consistent racing, the number is too limited. Garner has been riding in grand form at the winter tracks and will no doubt command a large salary from one of the big owners here. Powers, the leading jockey of 1908, has signed to ride for Phil Clum, the western turfman. As the latter has announced that he will sell his stable and sail for France, it is more than likely that Powers will accompany him.

MISSION FOR MEN

WILL CLOSE AT SACRED HEART CHURCH TOMORROW

The men's mission at the Sacred Heart church will close tomorrow evening at 6.30 o'clock.

Confessions were heard after the 5 o'clock mass today from 9 to 12 m., and in the afternoon from 3 to 6, and in the evening from 7.30 o'clock until every one is heard. The following will be the order of exercises at the service tomorrow evening at 6.30 o'clock. Commencing with the recitation of the rosary, sermon, promulgation of the law, renewal of baptismal vows, equal benediction, reception of new candidates into the Holy Name society, and closing with solemn benediction of the Most Blessed Sacrament. The singing will be congregational.

The boys' mission closed at 8 o'clock mass this morning, after which the papal benediction was given by one of the missionary fathers.

JOHN J. HIGGINS

May Seek Position of Attorney General

BOSTON, Feb. 26.—Attorney General Dana Malone announced last evening that he is not a candidate for reelection this fall. In a statement he said:

"Many of my friends have suggested that I should again be a candidate for attorney general at the election next fall and they have been good enough to say that if I should conclude to do so there would be no contest in the republican convention. I have considered this question carefully and have finally decided that I shall not be a candidate."

"When my present term expires I shall have been attorney general for five years, having given all my time to the duties of the office. I, therefore, feel that I shall have served the commonwealth as long as I ought, and will then be ready to retire and to resume the private practice of my profession."

The decision of the attorney general caused no surprise in political circles as it has been generally known for some time that it was his intention to retire at the end of this term.

The only avowed candidate in the field at the present time is District Attorney James M. Swift of Fall River, who has been actively canvassing for support for months.

His friends in the legislature have been predicting his nomination and are at work making combinations with other legislators in different sections of the state in his interest.

There is talk of Dist. Atty. Scott Peters of Essex county entering the contest, as there is also of District Atty. John J. Higgins of Somerville.

The refusal of Atty. Gen. Malone to again be a candidate removes the last western Massachusetts man from the present republican state ticket. To remedy this defect, it is said that the republican managers intend to see that A. P. Langtry, now a member of the legislature from Springfield, who has no love for Gov. Francis, is nominated for auditor at the state convention. This, it is thought, will pacify the western part of the state republicans.

HONEY MELLODY

Won the Decision From Jack Johnson

BROCKTON, Feb. 26.—Honey Melody of Charlestown showed something of his old time form in his 12 round ring debate with Young Jack Johnson, a Boston brunette, before the Union A. C. in this city last night, winning the decision by a mile. There were 800 present, including many from Boston, to cheer Melody, and the decision was a popular one, Melody appearing to be a big favorite.

Before the match it was said that he was going back and that he had lost his punch. But his work in the ring seemed to be against this contention, for in the 11th and 12th rounds it was Melody who did the leading. Melody who forced Johnson to give ground and take severe punishment, and he would up fresh and with wind to spare. A match with Tommy Quill, the Brockton lightweight, has been suggested as the next event for Melody.

He had pretty much the better of the argument all through the bout, setting the pace for the first six rounds as well as the finish. Johnson was game, however, and took punishment without flinching. The seventh and eighth rounds were the two in which Johnson showed good form.

Teddy Murphy of Randolph and Frank Maloney of Boston went six rounds to a draw in a preliminary. Young Whitney of Rockland, who is said to be a comer, stopped Young Ashport of Brockton in two rounds.

CALLED DRAW

LEWISTON, Me., Feb. 26.—Before the Armory Athletic club at city hall last night, Gus Larabee of Lewiston and Al Limerick of Bangor, Me., fought six hotly contested rounds to a draw. In the third Larabee landed a hard left on Limerick's chin which floored him. Limerick showed much cleverness in evading Larabee's hard swings, his fast foot work being especially noticeable.

In the semi-final Young Porter of Auburn knocked out Kid Gagon of Lewiston in the fifth round of what was to be a six-round go.

In the preliminaries Shadow McCormick and Joe Chitwood, both of Lewiston, went six rounds to a draw, and Timmy Breen of Lewiston and Young Garlarneau, both of Lewiston, fought six rounds, honors going to Breen.

FRANKIE NEIL LOST

BALTIMORE, Feb. 26.—In the 13th round of a scheduled 15 round bout before the Boreka Athletic Club last night the police ordered the fight stopped and Willie Jones of Brooklyn decision over Frankie Neil of California. Neil was almost out in the 13th round, being saved only by the bell, and apparently could not have lasted through the 13th.

HONEY MELLODY

To Meet Jimmie Moriarty at Gladstone

Jimmie Moriarty, the local welterweight, will have the battle of his life next Tuesday evening when he will meet Honey Melody of Charlestown in a 12 round bout before the Gladstone Athletic club of this city in Gladstone hall. While it was announced Thursday evening that Moriarty would meet another man next week the management of the club by changing the date of the meeting next week secured the services of Melody and he will appear here positively on next Tuesday evening. Melody is one of the best known boxers in the country, being a glove artist of national reputation. "Way back in his early career he was kicking such good men as Billy Gaudy, Ed Stone, Belfield Wolcott, Geo. Ashley and Patsy Sweeney. He has knocked out Terry Martin twice at Chelsea in 12 and 11 rounds. He defeated the redoubtable Joe Wolcott twice at Chelsea in 12 and 15 rounds. He kicked Charlie McKeever twice and got a third decision over Terry Martin and knocked out Willie Lewis in four rounds. Joe Thomas, Frank Mantell and Mike Twin Sullivan were the only men who have defeated him in recent years. Melody weighs 140 lbs. and is a welterweight. Jimmie has been coming along like a race horse since he re-entered the ring and there was talk of sending him against Jimmie Gardner or some of the big ones. Some of the members of the Gladstone club thought, however, that Jimmie ought to tackle some one who is a skilled boxer as well as a wallower before going abroad for the top-notchers and the matchmaker of the club has acted promptly on the suggestion. If Jimmie Moriarty can defeat Honey Melody he can step at once into the front rank of the welterweight class. Jimmie has the opportunity of his lifetime next Tuesday evening. While getting a big drawing card for the main event next Tuesday evening the management want the limit and has secured a fine line of eight rounds between Moriarty and Melody. The fight will be of six rounds between Kid Mack and Kid Walsh of this city at 120 pounds. Kid Murray has been seen in the local ring before, while Kid Mack makes his first professional appearance at the city in his interest.

There is talk of Dist. Atty. Scott Peters of Essex county entering the contest, as there is also of District Atty. John J. Higgins of Somerville.

The refusal of Atty. Gen. Malone to again be a candidate removes the last western Massachusetts man from the present republican state ticket. To remedy this defect, it is said that the republican managers intend to see that A. P. Langtry, now a member of the legislature from Springfield, who has no love for Gov. Francis, is nominated for auditor at the state convention. This, it is thought, will pacify the western part of the state republicans.

BOWLING SCORES

Some Lively Contests on the Alleys

The C. M. A. C. gave the Knights of Equity team a severe trouncing in a game in the Catholic league alleys, and the much feared team, to win even one point. Lebrun of the winning team went two better than the 300 mark and was high roller of the event.

The Prefectures took two points from the majestics in the Lamson league. Two teams, each of which was composed of five young ladies and one man, representing the United States Bunting Co. and United States Cartridge Co. met on the alleys last night, the former team being victorious in the contest held. ## WRESTLING BOUT

Maupas Beat Killonis at Graeco-Roman

One of the most entertaining wrestling matches ever held in this city drew a fair sized gathering to Associate hall last evening when Emilio Maupas, the Canadian heavyweight, met and defeated John Killonis, champion middleweight, in the west mixed style. The Canadian getting two falls, Graeco-Roman style, at which he is a past master, and Killonis taking one at catch-as-catch-can. Maupas weighed about 180, while Killonis weighed 160. The Graeco-Roman style is a more unfamiliar with Graeco-Roman wrestling, and it was at a disadvantage. Killonis took the first fall, catch-as-catch-can, in 27 minutes, while Maupas got the second in 15, Graeco-Roman. The man making his fall in the shorter time held the privilege of naming the style of the third session, and hence Maupas decided upon Graeco-Roman. The match was as clean as a whistle and spectacular in the extreme. Every old kind of a hold was shown and like a miscelany of head spins and bridges, for neither man wasted a moment throughout. In the Graeco-Roman style Maupas did a head hold stunt on his opponent that brought the crowd to its feet and was worth the price of admission. Grasping Killonis about the neck with both arms, he held him off the mat and swung him around like a sort of whirling dervish, for almost a minute, finally dropping him face foremost on the mat. Both winner and loser were cheered by the well satisfied crowd. After the match Killonis stated that he was in bad on Graeco-Roman, but would put up money for a match with Maupas, catch-as-catch-can style.

In the preliminaries, Jim Pappas defeated John Vallis in straight falls, and John Pastakopoulos won over Chris Cosmos. Two little fellows nicknamed Sampson and Sandow gave an amusing exhibition.

James Prokes refused the preliminaries bouts, and John Brissette, the main event, George Y. Toner, who was scheduled to referee, telegraphed at the last moment that it would be impossible for him to be present.

DARTMOUTH STUDENTS

Had Narrow Escape From Death This Morning

Fire in Dormitory Caused Loss of $60,000 — The Blaze Started From Crossed Wires—Students Lost All Their Personal Effects

HANOVER, N. H., Feb. 26.—Many narrow escapes from death featured a spectacular fire which drove over fifty Dartmouth students from their beds in dormitory South, Fayerweather and totally destroyed the building early today, causing a loss estimated at $60,000. That no one was injured is considered miraculous as the flames swept through the building with great rapidity, forcing a number of the students to jump from the windows into the snow. Others made ropes of blankets and bedrobes and lowered themselves to the ground. The temperature was hovering about 20 degrees below and the suffering of the scantily clad young men was extreme. They were hustled to shelter in nearby apartments.

The blaze started from crossed wires in the basement in the dormitory a four story square brick structure at the corner of Wheelock street and Fayerweather yard. Discovering the flames the night watchman sounded the alarm but before the sleeping students could make their way down stairs the fire had swept up through the fireproof and shut off escape by the interior of the building.

In less than half an hour the dormitory had been consumed, only the brick walls remaining. Hanover's fire department is a small one and the fire had gained such headway when the apparatus arrived that the flames could not be checked so the firemen only worked to prevent it from spreading. Nearly all the student body at the college witnessed the fire.

South Fayerweather hall was built but two years ago. It cost $25,000. All the personal effects of the students were lost.

Had an Audience With King Edward Today

LONDON, Feb. 26.—Premier Asquith had an audience with King Edward at Buckingham palace today and the circumstances have given rise to many fantastic reports. The fact seems to be that the premier after yesterday's cabinet council asked for today's audience of the king of vacillating his majesty with the proposed ministerial scheme in which the elective principle will be substituted for the hereditary principle. The ministerialists consider an elective system as hereditary principle a good battle cry with which they may appeal to the country when the time comes for an election which is inevitable before their proposals can be embodied in the constitution.

Today's cabinet council was prolonged unusually. The ministers required three hours with which to reach a final decision on the plans to be represented in the house of commons on Monday when they will be obliged to come into close grip with the question of finance and the veto power of the lords. Subsequently Premier Asquith and most of the other members of the cabinet left to spend the week-end in the company where they will be out of the reach of the "rebels" whose harrying during the past week has made life burdensome for them.

TYNGSBORO FAIR

Closed Last Evening, a Grand Success

The second evening's entertainment of the Tyngsboro V. I. A. fair drew another large and thoroughly pleased gathering to the town hall. The second presentation of "The Village Schoolmarum" was even better than its predecessor, for it proceeded smoother and everyone was right at home in his or her part. Miss J. L. Downie in the title role gave a most artistic interpretation of the part, while Mr. and Mrs. Paul Kable were unanimously voted to be as clever as any professionals that Tyngsboro has ever seen.

GIFFORD PINCHOT

Likely to Make an Attack on Secretary Ballinger

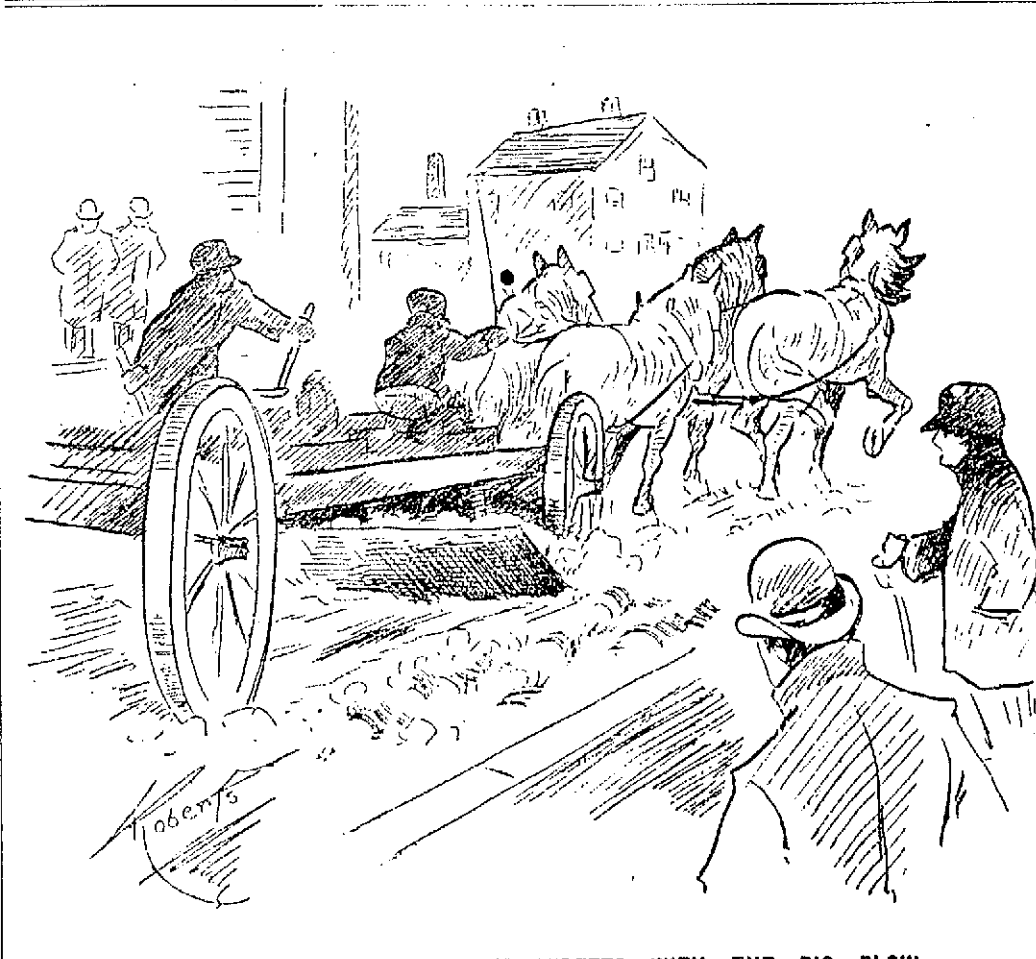

WASHINGTON, Feb. 26.—The crowd of spectators which has been following the Ballinger-Pinchot hearing gathered in great numbers at the senate office building this morning with the expectation of seeing Gifford Pinchot take the stand today and explain his dealings with Mr. Ballinger. Mr. Pinchot, it is said, spent much time in the preparation of his examination on the witness stand.

It was announced last night that he would call a number of witnesses to bring out charges that it was said he would make against Mr. Ballinger, especially with regard to the disposition of water power sites. Mr. Pinchot also will do all that he can, it is predicted, to substantiate Mr. Glavis.

It was not definitely known until today just what course Mr. Pinchot would pursue, but it is evident from the announcements that have been made as coming from the former chief forester that he will make an attack upon the secretary of the interior second only to that of Glavis himself.

ALL UP FOR THE DOWN RIVER BOULEVARD.

Lowell has a splendid opportunity to have a boulevard down the river as well as up the river. For many years past the people of this city have found the up river boulevard one of the most enjoyable resorts within their reach. They have always felt the want of a boulevard down the river on either side.

There is now an opportunity such as the city has never had before to have a state highway constructed from Lowell to Lawrence, a highway that will equal that between Lowell and Tyngsboro. It can be had also at an expense to Lowell that compared with the expense of constructing our city boulevard will be a mere trifle.

The state highway commission is ready to go to work on the construction of a splendid boulevard between Lowell and Lawrence, provided the necessary conditions be fulfilled by the abutting municipalities.

There is one obstacle in the way and one that should be quickly removed. The state highway will not macadamize or build any road except if it has first been laid out in rough grade by the county and abutting towns.

There is a section of the proposed route that crosses private land along the tracks of the Boston and Northern street railway from Varnum's Landing to the old Lawrence road. This must be laid out and rough graded as a road before the state highway will touch it.

The county engineer has estimated the cost of grading the Middlesex county portion at $11,000. Of this the county will pay half. Lowell is asked to pay one-fourth and Dracut one-fourth. The expense to Lowell would be about $2700.

It is not too much to say that if this boulevard would cost our city $10,000 instead of the amount stated it should be paid. A boulevard down the river would be a splendid outlet for our people, a great source of pleasure and recreation fully as good as our city boulevard. This small sum should not deter the city council from authorizing the payment of our share of the expense and the endorsement of the scheme as already planned.

A great deal of money is expended on state highways and Lowell has not had a sufficient share of this money. We should have a boulevard on either side of the river between Lowell and Lawrence. Already there is a fine state highway connecting Lawrence and Haverhill, and the latter city has the benefit of two such highways on either side the river to Newburyport. It seems that the interests of Lowell in these matters have been neglected in the past.

Mayor Meehan has expressed himself in favor of this new boulevard, stating that Lowell will not hold back any public improvement by an unprogressive policy.

The road from the Lowell line to Varnum's Landing was laid out and built by the town of Dracut assisted by contributions from the abutters. The town of Methuen, we understand, has some hesitation in doing its part towards the laying out of this new section of road across private land. It is to be hoped that it will follow the example of Dracut in favoring all such improvements even though it cannot at all times afford the expense.

Here then is an opportunity to secure a splendid boulevard down the beautiful Merrimack valley, and one that should be promptly accepted.

There is a bill at present before the general court apportioning the expense of laying out this section of road between the counties of Middlesex and Essex, the city of Lowell and the town of Dracut. This measure should receive the support of all the Lowell representatives in the legislature. It is a matter of vast importance to our city, inasmuch as good roads are at the present time essential to travel and the bad roads are shunned by automobilists and others. The city that cannot be reached by good roads will be avoided. By the absence of boulevards between Lawrence and Lowell we have set up barriers to prevent people coming to our city. There is now an opportunity to have a state highway constructed on one side of the river. Let that opportunity be grasped as soon as possible. It will afterwards be in order to secure a boulevard on the other side the river. There is no reason why we should not have a state highway on the south side also. But one thing at a time. Let the state highway on the north side be first completed. The other will come in due time. Lowell should demand that the state highway commission spend more of its appropriation in the vicinity of Lowell.

The members of the common council apparently did not quite understand the proposition as it came before them at the last meeting. Let us hope the matter will be favorably acted upon without delay in order to show clearly that Lowell is not pursuing a dog-in-the-manger policy that may prevent a public improvement of the greatest importance to the city and towns in this part of the state. Lowell should be a leader in all such movements and should not require to be urged into them by neighboring towns.

The state highway as already planned would enter Lowell by First street along the street railway tracks. In a year or two, however, a level road may be constructed along the river bank on the made land and joining the highway near the car barn. This road passing through the romantic "Indian Orchard" would lead to one of the most beautiful spots to be found in the whole course of the river. The so-called orchard could then be laid out as a public park, and as such would be of unrivaled beauty.

AN INJUDICIOUS POLICE BILL.

We do not believe the bill providing that a discharged police officer should have the right of appeal to the superior court for review should become law. It is wrong in principle, and the Massachusetts Police Relief association made a mistake in bringing it forward.

Such a law would destroy discipline and demoralize any police department. To pass such a bill would enable officers removed for just cause to hold up the acts of their superiors, pending an appeal to the superior court. It would thus block removal for cause rather than protect the officer against unjust removal, for a police board would hesitate to use its authority if its decision were to be the subject of long and expensive litigation.

A law of this kind would throw a lot of insignificant matters into the superior court now overcrowded with cases. It would be a confession of our inability to manage our police department. We have not arrived at that stage as yet.

The steady employees of other departments have just as good a right to seek a review by the court when discharged. It is the bane of any department to encourage or legalize insubordination. This law would have the same effect as political pull that leads a man to believe his superiors would not dare remove him and which has worked such demoralization in New York and other cities.

The aim of the law should be to aid discipline, not to destroy it. When police officers realize that they are working under the orders of a body that has power to discharge them for cause, they will be more attentive to duty.

Should any officer be discharged without sufficient cause, he can find a remedy in the courts without the aid of a new law. Besides, it is not creditable to a city to be carrying its affairs into court to be held up to the gaze of the entire country. Municipal boards are worthless unless they have absolute power to enforce their decrees. This is particularly and emphatically true of a police board which has to deal with a semi-military body of men.

SEEN AND HEARD

A young lady of our acquaintance is responsible for the statement that palmistry works splendidly as a starter when the young man is bashful.

There certainly would be something doing if that should fall flatter than a pancake.

It has been noted that light remarks often make heavy hearts.

"Yesterday," says a man who is quoted by a contemporary, "a friend who heard that I sometimes suffered from insomnia told me of a sure cure. 'Eat a quart of peanuts and drink two or three glasses of milk before going to bed,' said he, and 'I'll warrant you'll be asleep within half an hour.'"

"I did as he suggested," the man proceeds, "and now, for the benefit of others who may be afflicted with insomnia, I feel it to be my duty to report what happened, so far as I am able to recall the details. 'First, let me say that my friend was right. I did go to sleep very soon after I retired. Then a friend with his head under his arm came along and asked me if I wanted to buy his feet. I was negotiating with him when the dragon on which I was riding slipped off his side and left me floating in mid-air. While I was considering how to get down, a bull with two heads peered over the edge of the well and said he would haul me up if I would first climb up and rig a winch for him.'"

"So, as I was sliding up the mountain side, the broken man came in, and I asked him when the train would reach my station. 'We passed your station four hundred and fifty years ago,' he said, calmly folding up the train and slipping it into his vest pocket. At this juncture the clown bounded into the ring and pulled the center pin out of the ground, lifting the tent and all the people in it up, while I stood on the earth below watching myself go out of sight among the clouds that floated on the ocean of time. 'Then I came to and found that I had been asleep almost three and one-half minutes.'"

The arrest of a hotel beat in Worcester the other day prompted a Brockton hotel manager to say: "I believe that's the fellow who trimmed me up—the only one. He came here in 1906 and told me on the quiet he would stay three weeks. He was a genial old chap, and a fussy fellow, but he was a good fellow. He had money to spare. Just before his first meal he came to the desk and asked to be introduced to the 'head waiter'—wanted a seat at the star boarder's table, he said. Had a lot of talk about star boarders and all that sort of thing and kept it up. 'Twice a day at least he kicked on the lack of heat in his room, although we could find nothing the matter. The day before settling time he came to the desk and very impressively demanded that his room be warm that night. He let me out of letters to write and must be comfortable. The radiator must be fixed before I come back,' were his parting words. He hasn't come back since. I want to see him badly, not so much for the coin he owes me as to explain to him about the radiator.'"

These hotel beats are numerous, but when they make a practise of going from town to town they get caught.

THE LAND OF YESTERDAY
Would you not seek the country town Amid green meadows nestled down If you could only find the way Into the Land of Yesterday?

How you would thrust the miles aside, Rush up the dear old lane, and then, Just where her roses lagged in pride, Find her among the flowers again! You'd slip in quietly and wait Until she saw you by the gate, And then—read through a blur of tears Quick pardon for the selfish years.

This time, this time, you would not This time, this time, you would not For the brief wire that said "Too late!" If you could only find the way Into the Land of Yesterday.

You wonder if her roses yet Lift up their heads and laugh with pride, And if her phlox and mignonette Have heart to blossom by their side; You wonder if the dear old lane Still chirps with robins after rain, And if the birds and banded bees Still rob her early cherry trees; You wonder if you went back now How everything would seem, and how— But no! not now; there is no way Back to the Land of Yesterday.

PEOPLE OF NOTE

Peabody museum has received from Percival Martin, a resident of the county of Kent, England, a collection of relics of prehistoric man obtained from valley deposits at Eastbourne, Lymington and Maldenhead, in that county. It consists of about 100 objects of an industrial character.

Frederick Van Bredon, Hollander, literateur, physician and communist, records in World's Work the story of a co-operative experiment which he carried on in England. His plan was to have farms established where every man out of work should be able to find useful employment under good supervision and management. These should be owned and supported by the state, which would also supply the land and the labor. The poor and rich must unite, "workers with workers, manual and intellectual and work only for those that work for them, excluding thereby the drones and the parasites." The experiment was frustrated because cause the class hatred of its beneficiaries prevented able management. Mr. Van Bredon has now come to America to try an experiment for "the liberation of the poor, the abolishment of the social abuses, the end of the empire of rank plutocracy." The arena of this experiment is to be laid in North Carolina and the details of his plan will be set forth in a future article.

Andrew Carnegie has promised to give $50,000 to enlarge Morse Hall at Cornell university. The building houses the department of chemistry. "I will give you $50,000 for the extension of the chemical laboratory on your statement that it will accommodate one hundred more students," is what Mr. Carnegie wrote to former President A. D. White. The intention is to have the new portions ready for occupancy at the beginning of the next university year. For several years facilities for chemistry have been inadequate. So great was the need of the extension that at the last meeting of the board of trustees it was voted to make the necessary additions. The $50,000 from Mr. Carnegie will help.

LABOR LEGISLATION DISCUSSED
WASHINGTON, Feb. 26.—Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, told Attorney-General Wickersham yesterday that if the present American workers' movement, which he said is constructive and conservative in character, is outlawed and crushed out of existence by unfavorable legislation and decisions, it will be followed by another movement which will scarcely be constructive. For two hours Mr. Gompers and Mr. Wickersham discussed legislation affecting labor.

COMMUNICATIONS
Boston, Feb. 23, 1910.
Editor of The Sun, Lowell, Mass.
Dear Sir:—In your issue of the 21st there appeared a Boston dispatch reporting a meeting of the American Federation of Catholic Societies, in which it was stated that "One man points out that Christian Science is but a religion of the cause of religion." Since this statement appears in company with various other statements it seems proper to furnish a few facts in regard to what Christian Science really does.

I understand the term "religion" applies to the peculiar beliefs and practices, especially the latter, which one has chosen to enhance his spiritual growth. We doubtless all agree that the creeds and dogmas of any religious denomination are of value only in so far as they contribute to the spiritual advancement of their devotees. Christian Science insists upon right doing; it insists upon the keeping of the sacred laws with the aid of the teaching of the scriptures, regarding Jesus Christ as the exemplar.

In the formulation of her religious system Mrs. Eddy has taken the Bible for her guide, and she has faithfully adhered to its behests. Her teaching excels all the views which are mentioned by our Catholic friends, and includes all the virtues which the report recommends, and for this reason we insist that in the instance under consideration an altogether improper classification of Christian Science has been made.

Yours very truly,
Alfred Farlow.

Pretty Hats From Paris

The Dearest Little Girl In the Smartest Spring Headgear

A STRAW DUTCH BONNET.

"SHALL I pose for you this morning?" coquettishly inquired the four-year-old little miss, whose pretty face appears in the illustration, crowned with the newest of hats just over from Paris, as she came tripping into the studio of a New York artist who makes a specialty of photographing fashions for children.

Hasn't she the dearest, most attractive little face you ever saw? But it's the smart headgear she wears and not the pretty model herself that's my secret today. These charming hats and bonnets, by the way, represent all that is chic in Paris millinery for the small girl's adornment in the spring. And most mothers will find it difficult to make a selection where all is so becoming and lovely. It's a case of "other dear charmer away." And the best part of it all is that, although of Parisian confection, these hats are within the power of any mother to reproduce, provided she is a little versed in the making of headgear.

Take, for instance, the very glorified satin ribbon of a delicious pale rose pink is draped about the crown and tied in an Alsatian bow at the side, from which depend ends that hang to the end of the curls that fall below her shoulders. At the side, immediately above the flat bow, is a choux of moss green velvet, the unusual French touch that sets a Rue de la Paix creation miles away from those of less aristocratic origin. This bonnet in a smart New York establishment is valued at $25, and a five dollar bill or less will produce the same sort of creation if made at home.

LINGERIE SUNBONNET.

sunbonnet. A wire frame or one of milliner's canvas is first covered with white chiffon. Over the crown is arranged loosely a covering of hand embroidered handkerchief linen of the same material that in their highly polished state resemble big pear shaped pearls. And, in passing, I would say that this tulle braid may be purchased in all widths, colors and patterns, and given a frame, the making of such a creation as the one I am exploiting is an easy matter. Frills of platted white shirred chiffon are put on the brim in a flat banded effect. Across the front of the fetching little chapeau is drawn carefully a band of white satin ribbon that finishes at one side with a long loop and fish tailed end and at the other side with a big, smart bow of the same ribbon. A small bunch of arbutus is artistically placed a little to the right of the front, directly above the large satin bow.

The Dutch bonnet still finds favor in the juvenile showing of spring millinery, and the example illustrated is good looking in the extreme. The foundation is a leghorn flat of medium size, shaped into the semblance of the bonnets worn by the peasantry in the land of windmills, tulips and pretty Holland maidens. Very likely the Princess Juliana, the tiny girl who some day is destined to rule over Holland, will wear a bonnet this season somewhat on the order of the creation we are describing, for her royal mother has a decided penchant for the native costume of her subjects. But, to return to the Dutch bonnet under discussion, it is trimmed with narrow ruchings of pink chiffon, very full and tightly gathered, that follow the outline of the bonnet shape. Satin ribbon in a little deeper tone of pink and a bunch of rosebuds nestle at one side of this fascinating piece of millinery. The ties are of the satin ribbon.

In frocks the long waisted French style with full short skirt is to be a favorite for girls from three to six years of age. And in gingham and linens the older girls will wear the Russian blouse gowns defined at the waist with patent leather belts. For everyday dresses worn by the small girl it is a good idea to cut the sleeves in one piece with the dress by prolonging the shoulder seam to the desired length of the sleeve (just above the elbow) and shaping it to form a kimono effect. The shoulder seam and the entire back of the dress are left open and finished with buttons and buttonholes, which may be made to button invisibly or to lend their aid in trimming the garment.

Such a frock does up beautifully and is a source of perpetual joy to the laundress. CATHERINE TALBOT.

When the Lamp Is Lit Musings of Elinor Hite

IT seems to me, a mere woman, that the charm of a girl lies not in beauty, but in individuality, if she could be brought to understand that fact. It isn't the details that count. It is, as Trilby said, "the altogether"—her carriage, her manner, her voice, her expression; in short, herself—that makes or unmakes her charm.

It is the woman, then, who has the courage to be herself that attracts.

Originals are so much more desirable than copies, no matter how accurate the copy may be. Even in the matter of modes this theory holds good. If it be natural to wear one's hair in a certain fashion, by all means do so. Don't try a mop or a swirl. Nature is never mistaken.

But let the admiring sister whom that same autocrat intended to be a tailor made girl beware of disorder. In her it would cease to be artistic. It would be simply untidy.

Let every girl dare to be herself, develop her own individuality and not blindly copy some other girl whom it may be, somebody for whose opinion she has a great respect admires.

Let her think for herself, act for herself and express her own honest opinions.

For individuality when combined with that nameless something we call manner is the most potent weapon in the possession of the sex. It is this charm which has given many a homely woman a reputation for beauty which a bona fide beauty with faultless face and features has sighed in vain to attain.

The Care of Household Linens

Few Housewives Can Tell Good Tablecloths and Sheets That Wear Well From Those Got Up For Show.

OUR great-grandmothers would be delighted could they but see the almost veneration which the women of today who know what's what has for a precious heirloom in the shape of a handsome tablecloth. The ladies of long ago went abroad to purchase their linens armed with a magnifying glass through which the threads were scanned to see whether they lay flat and close, as well behaved threads should do.

be evenly distributed and no articles left to discolor through disuse. Extra quality cloths and table napkins are, however, often reserved for occasional use, and these should always be put apart from the regular stock and kept unstarched, as starch rots the threads in time. This does not mean that they must be perfectly limp, but merely that they should be got up in the French way. The Frenchwoman never uses starch. Clean cloths are wrung tightly out of hot water and the cloths ironed at once with heavy and very hot irons.

The finished linen is glossy, smooth and of just the right stiffness. Linen so treated will last for many, many years.

This places on linen should be darned with fine sewing cotton before they reach the "holey" stage. Sheets thin in the middle should be turned, outer edge inward, and finely seamed in order to avoid an irritating ledge. Worn tablecloths can be cut down into tray cloths, table napkins and doilies.

Accidents are responsible for stains on the linen, carelessness in ironing for scorches, neglect and disuse for mildew and the yellow tint so often thought unavoidable.

A stain treated while still wet is easier to remove than when dry. Put salt at once on a fruit stain. When the table is cleared rub a little salt in with a slice of lemon, hold the stain over a basin and pour boiling water through.

A scorch is a serious accident, as the threads of the linen are weakened. To remove this put on a paste of starch and rub it in with an onion. For a really bad scorch make a paste of fuller's earth and vinegar. Add a little dry soap to this and rub the paste into the scorch with a raw potato. Let it dry and repeat if necessary.

Mildew of long standing can generally be removed by rubbing with dry soap and starch mixed to a paste and rubbed in with a raw potato. Put the linen in the sun and the stain will disappear as it dries.

DAPHNE DEAN.

Helps In the Household

FOR keeping clothes white put in the boiler three or four slices of lemon when the water is cold. It will do no injury to the clothes, but will whiten them beautifully.

If new gloves are placed between folds of a damp towel for an hour before being worn they are much easier to put on. The damp causes the kid to become more pliable so that the gloves will stretch to the required shape without cracking or splitting.

DON'T DARN STOCKINGS. Darning stockings used to be a prevalent industry, but nowadays paraffin—the useful articles has taken its place in a measure. Clever mothers have proved to their satisfaction that paraffin rubbed over the heels, soles and toes of stockings when they are new impart a strength to the threads that doubles their wearing qualities. This is a boon to many an overburdened woman to whom "the darning" is the last straw required to make the day more than she can bear.

A LAUNDRY HINT. When doing up collars and cuffs put them in cold starch made by mixing two tablespoonfuls of starch with one pint of cold water. Just before ironing rub on each article a little soap, then with a clean white damp rag rub lightly on the right side a little prepared chalk. The iron will glide along and will give a lovely gloss.

It is not generally known that cabbage will be a better color and also that no small will be present while cooking it if, when it is boiled for about ten minutes, the water is poured off and fresh boiling water added. It then being cooked in the usual way until done.

TO STONE RAISINS. Pour boiling water over the raisins, let them stand for a few minutes and drain the water off and you will find that the stones can be quickly and easily squeezed out from the stem end without taking away the flavor.

ORANGE OMELET. Peel and slice in long strips three oranges and dust a little sugar over them. Beat the yolks of three eggs and stir into them two tablespoonfuls of sugar, the sume of orange juice and the grated rind of two oranges. Add to this mixture the well whipped whites of the eggs and place quickly into a hot buttered omelet pan. When the omelet is set and commencing to brown lay the slices of orange on the top, fold over and serve at once with castor sugar sprinkled over.

The Latest Theatrical Fad—The Inhalatorium

THE picture shows the "Inhalatorium" recently installed at the Casino, New York city. The strain on the voices of the company is very severe in "The Chocolate Soldier," now running at this theater, and it became necessary for members of the chorus and some of the principals to have

CHORUS GIRLS HAVING THEIR THROATS TREATED BETWEEN THE ACTS.

Meals Without Meat

Appetizing Variations In the Cooking of Familiar Vegetables

NOW that the prices of meat are so high many housewives are arranging their meals without meat or are substituting some vegetable dish to take its place. Among the dishes without meat which will not be found wanting by those who are devoted to flesh food are the following:

QUAKER CABBAGE.

Take a medium sized fresh head of cabbage and cut into quarters, discarding the outer green leaves. Cut out the heart, wash and drain dry. Put into a kettle and cover with boiling water to which a tablespoonful of salt and a scant teaspoonful of soda have been added. After it commences to boil remove the cover and cook rapidly for twenty-five minutes. When tender pour off the water and drain in a colander, pressing with a plate to get out every drop of water. Put back in the kettle with a tablespoonful of butter and a large teaspoonful of flour stirred together. Add a scant teaspoonful of salt, a little pepper and a half cupful of milk. Let the milk boil up through the cabbage, cutting through several times with a knife, then remove from the fire and serve.

CELERY PATTIES.

Wash the celery and cut in half inch pieces, boil until tender and drain. Add two tablespoonfuls of butter and season with salt and pepper, then fill, bake in putty shells and put in a brisk oven for five minutes. Serve with a sauce made of one-half cup of the celery water, one cup of milk, three tablespoonfuls each of butter and flour and add salt to taste.

SQUASH FRITTERS.

To two cups of mashed dry winter squash add one cup of milk, two well beaten eggs, one teaspoonful of salt, a little pepper and one heaping teaspoon of baking powder. Beat well and drop by spoonfuls into hot butter or cooking oil and fry.

POTATOES WITH CHEESE. Split Irish potatoes which have been baked and sprinkle with grated cheese, return to the oven long enough for the cheese to melt. Serve hot.

FISH SOUFFLE.

Make a white sauce of two tablespoonfuls of butter, two tablespoonfuls of flour, one cupful of milk, salt and pepper to taste and one teaspoonful of onion juice. When cooked pour over two eggs with the yolks well beaten, then add one cupful of whitefish steamed twenty minutes and flaked. When slightly cooled add two eggs with the whites stiffly beaten. Bake from twenty to thirty minutes.

LOBSTER CREOLE.

Have ready one heaping pint of lobster meat, fresh or canned. Heat one tablespoonful of butter, add one tablespoonful of chopped onion, one green pepper seeded and chopped fine and half a cupful of rich tomato sauce. Cook for five minutes, then add one cupful of clear chicken broth, cook for five minutes longer, then add the lobster and salt to taste. As soon as the lobster is heated through it is ready to serve.

A VEGETARIAN CUTLET.

Four hard boiled eggs, one and one-half pound of field mushrooms, three tablespoonfuls of water, a little rice flour, one ounce of butter and a pinch of salt. To make the cutlet peel the mushrooms and cook them for ten minutes in the water. Drain and chop them with the eggs. Add butter to the liquid and thicken with the rice flour, stirring in the chopped egg and mushroom. Press the mixture into cutlet tins, and when cold turn out and fry. Serve with peas and mint sauce.

Some Ways of Women.

DURING the winter months the windows are apt to get frosted over and look very ugly. To remedy this they should first be cleaned and rubbed with pure glycerin. Polish lightly with a clean dry cloth and the windows will keep clean for weeks.

To spread butter easily on the thinnest bread in cold weather have a cup of boiling water handy, into which dip the point of the knife each time before cutting a piece from the butter. This renders it just right for spreading evenly. New bread or cake may be cut without jagged edges if the blade of the knife used be heated for a second.

When hanging up the broom or dustbrush or dustpan use fine wire instead of cord. It not only looks better and wears longer than cord, which is soon soiled, but is much easier to hang the article up by. The time saved in slipping the wire over the hook will more than repay you for the trouble of providing it.

One woman makes her gloves last longer by turning the fingers wrong side out when the gloves are new and pasting small strips of court plaster over the seams. It is probable that most of us would not be that painstaking, but if new gloves make an appreciable hole in one's pocketbook the scheme might be worth trying.

In Japan the wife is inferior to her husband and also to his parents, with whom she resides and is obliged to obey. Japanese husbands and wives never walk out side by side, and if the wife dies before her spouse he does not attend the funeral, but sends the children.

In one of the New Zealand cemeteries is a grave on which the following words are inscribed after the age and name of the dead girl: "She Was so Pleasant." What a delightful character she must have been to deserve such an epitaph, a most lovable girl. Young women ought to live their lives to merit the praise given to the dead girl in that far off land, for alas, many girls nowadays might be rightly called unpleasant, if not snippy.

Mrs. W. Hinckle Smith of Philadelphia is a society woman who annually celebrates her birthday, a fact that would be of little interest except that each year she takes as many children for an outing on that day as she is years old. Consequently her age is well known, and that is so unusual that it is worth mentioning.

An original use for a discarded cradle was hit upon by Queen Sophia of Sweden when she had the cradle in which the royal children were rocked lined with tin so that it might be used as a receptacle for flowers. The cradle is a wonderful piece of workmanship in ebony and pearl and was presented to the late King Oscar by the sultan of Turkey.

A GIFT FOR THE BABY.

A useful gift that every mother will be sure to appreciate is to make for the baby one of the dainty shawl wraps and hoods that are now so much worn.

These little wraps are in one piece, the hood arranged by running a casing across one point of a square to form a hood and turning the edge in to form a frill. The point of square falls down the back, and ribbons are fastened to each side of hood to hold the shawl on. While it would be comparatively easy to cut such a wrap without a pattern, it is much simpler to pay 10 or 15 cents for a good paper pattern, as this gives directions for both the long and short shawl wraps.

The materials used are fine French flannel, supple cashmere or any other soft wool goods that will wash or clean easily. For the summer baby the wraps are left unlined, as they are cooler. A soft, firm china silk makes the best lining. A yard and a quarter of yard wide material will be needed for the long wrap.

The edges can either be faced back and basted or they can be bound with a three inch wash ribbon. The woman who likes to embroider can work a small buttonhole scallop on the edge and finish it with five rows of graduated dots. A twisted silk is preferred to mercerized cottons for embroidering on woolen fabrics.

WIFE WHO HELPED HUSBAND.

Some of the greatest men have ascribed their worldly success as well as their happiness to their wives. The celebrated sculptor Flaxman married Anne Wenman, a charming and lovable woman, who said, when her husband told her that Sir Joshua Reynolds expressed his opinion that marriage had ruined his future career as an artist: "I will never have it said that Anne Wenman ruined John Flaxman for an artist." A great artist you shall be and visit Rome.

"But how?" asked Flaxman.

"Work and economize," said his wife.

For five years Mrs. Flaxman practiced the most unselfish economy, and at last her efforts were rewarded, and the seven years that Flaxman spent studying in Rome firmly established his position in after life as a great sculptor, and he always acknowledged his wife's devotion had practically founded his future success.

Here's the "Chantecler" Hat

ALL the rage in Paris now is the "Chantecler" hat, modeled in honor of Edmond Rostand's new play, the

"Chantecler," in which all the characters are represented as animals or fowls. The hat typifies in itself the leading role of the unique play, having a whole rooster for trimming. We may expect to see the "Chantecler" hat in America soon, and who be unto the barnyard chanteclers when it arrives!

A HINT FOR ENGAGED COUPLES.

The wise young couple who are not blessed with too many of this world's goods and who are going to face the future together will find it a good plan to have a self dental money box and occasionally drop into it the money which might be spent on little trinkets which every girl looks forward to. There's no need to be too self denying, as moderate amusement is a real tonic, but if Jack puts the money away that sometimes he meant to spend on flowers or the theater and Jill does likewise with the money she spends on chocolate or chiffons there will be found to be quite a nice sum at the end of the year in the "self dental" box, which can be laid out eventually in the new home.

BOOKS OF BANK To Be Examined by Representative of Comptroller Murray

WASHINGTON, Feb. 26.—An investigation is to be made by the office of the comptroller of the currency to determine whether the examinations of the bank examiner into the condition of the National City bank of Cambridge, Mass., previously to that which resulted in the discovery of a big shortage, and the closing of the institution this week were thorough and whether the defalcation should have been ascertained sooner than it was.

NOT YET FOUND BANK TRUSTEES

Body of Miss McCallum Rep. E. Barlow Wants Still Missing Them to Give Bonds

The body of Edith McCallum, the young woman who ended her life by jumping into the Pawtucket canal several weeks ago, has not been recovered as yet, and the body of the Eastman, who has been searching for the body, is of the opinion that it will not be found until the water is drawn off in the spring.

The men who were grappling for the body made a careful search of the Pawtucket and Northern canals, but without avail, and they are of the opinion that it is caught somewhere in one of the canals. They feel that if it were not caught some place in one of the canals it would have come to the surface before this.

Undertaker Eastman has given up grappling for the body, but has several men who walk along the banks of the canal to see if the body has risen to the surface.

MAYOR FINED

CHIEF MAGISTRATE OF HOBOKEN IN CONTEMPT
NEW YORK, Feb. 26.—Mayor Geo. Gonzales of Hoboken was adjudged guilty of contempt of court by County Judge John A. Blair in Jersey City yesterday afternoon for refusing to give testimony before the grand jury in the case against former Building Inspector Frederick Steigler of Hoboken last Friday and for bluntness telling the jurors that he had heard they intended to whitewash the case.

The mayor was fined $100 and he at once filed an appeal to the supreme court. His lawyers claim that the proceedings were not legal and that the state should have prosecuted him for perjury if it could be proved that he was not telling the truth.

Gonzales denied in his own defence that he had any intention to contaminate the authority of the grand jury. He said he was treated by the jurors like a defendant and not as a witness.

LABOR LEADER

Was Charged With Inciting to Riot

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 26.—The beginning of the second week of the strike against the Philadelphia Rapid Transit Co. finds the city authorities apprehensive of what today and tomorrow may develop in spite of the great gains toward the complete re-establishment of order made in the last two days. Today is a half holiday in many of the industrial plants whose employees are strongly in sympathy with the strikers and the ability of the police to control crowds is expected to be again severely tested. Last Sunday proved to be the hardest day on the police of any during the strike.

The arrest of John J. Murphy, the young president of the Central Labor union, who was given a hearing today on the charge of inciting a riot, has added to the uneasiness in labor circles. The warrant for Murphy's arrest was issued by the director of Public Safety, following the publication in an afternoon paper of the following statement, said to have been made by the head of the Central Labor union.

"You can depend upon it that by Sunday's meeting a general strike will be called. If one man is shot in Kensington there will follow a carnival of riot and bloodshed which will startle the entire country. I should not care to be responsible for such an outbreak. The state police would be helpless; I want it understood that there are men in the northeast who can shoot as straight as any trooper who ever drew breath. Just wait a little while for development, and you will see something which will open your eyes."

"This statement was made to newspaper reporters for publication," said Director Clay, "one of whom was sent for and who stated that the above statement of Mr. Murphy's as published is substantially correct. I have been advised by the law officers of the city and county that the same is a violation of law and inciting to riot, and therefore it is my duty as director of public safety to place him under arrest."

Murphy denied that he had made such a statement for publication. He says that he merely expressed an opinion as to what might develop if the strike continues and the company refuses to arbitrate. The published statement, he says, shows that a warning and not a threat was intended. Like Pratt, who was denied bail when arrested, Murphy was held in $3000.

WARRANT FOR HEAD OF CENTRAL LABOR UNION

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 26.—Following the publication of a statement alleged to have been made by John J. Murphy, president of the Central Labor union that "a general strike should be called immediately, I think it is inevitable. There are men in the northeast who can shoot as straight as any trooper who ever drew a breath," a warrant was issued last night for the labor leader charging him with "inciting to riot."

The remarks on which the warrant for Murphy's arrest were based were said to have been made by him after the announcement that at a special meeting of the board of directors of the Philadelphia Rapid Transit company, the request for arbitration submitted by the committee of prominent clergymen had been declined.

Riots in West Philadelphia and in the southern section of the city followed the running of cars after dark.

A crowd of men and boys showered bricks, stones and pieces of food at the motormen, conductors and policemen who were guarding the cars. A policeman on guard at a nearby power house, however, came to the rescue and with drawn revolvers forced his way through the crowd and succeeded in dragging the injured men to the powerhouse. When fifty blue-coats reached the scene the crowd had dispersed, leaving the cars badly wrecked.

Other riots were reported at 30th and Market streets and in several other sections of West Philadelphia.

STRIKE ONLY A MEMORY, SAYS DIRECTOR CLAY

Director of Public Safety, Clay, said in an interview that the strike is now merely a memory. He also issued orders forbidding the use of weapons which have been doing a thriving business hauling to and from work persons who would not risk themselves to ride on the cars while the temper of the strike sympathizers was at fever heat.

At the meeting of the board of directors of the Philadelphia Rapid Transit Co. yesterday, it was decided that any strikers whose previous record was good, would be taken back by the company provided he applied for his position before March 1. A reply was made to the committee of clergymen politely but firmly refusing to submit to the proposed arbitration. This attitude of the company caused renewal of the plans for a sympathetic strike.

C. O. Pratt, the organizer of the car men, who has been opposing this plan said: "The street car strike has ceased to become a local issue. It is now a national one. The state and the American Federation stand by to give whatever support is deemed necessary. The Cigar Makers' union yesterday adopted resolutions of sympathy with the street car men and pledged moral and financial support."

SOME MILL NEWS

Massachusetts Clearing the Way for New Buildings

Textile Paper Commends Company's Plans—Future Exceptionally Bright—The Merrimack Print Works Closed for One Week—Big Stir at Middlesex Mills

As was stated in these columns a week ago, the Massachusetts Cotton mills will not lose any time in starting work on their new buildings.

The trees along the canal in East Merrimack street have been cut down preparatory to putting up the five-story building already described in these columns.

The building will extend from the railroad tracks back of the Rannels building across the canal and along East Merrimack street to the Concord river.

Give ear to what Fibre and Fabric, of even date, has to say about the Massachusetts mills:

"The Massachusetts mills of Lowell have adopted the right course in their plans for expansion, as explained last week, and owing to the fact that much Massachusetts mill stock is held by trustees, who do not feel justified in adding to their holdings, a generous supply of rights has come into the market, and at present prices they are very attractive. The future of Massachusetts mills is so exceptionally bright that the shares anywhere under 136 are a good permanent investment. With the changes and additions planned the earning capacity should increase in greater proportion than the increase in dividend requirement, owing to the $1,200,000 increase in capital, and there is the big Georgia plant that will some day be bonded to shareholders in the parent company as a present. The time is so short for taking up the new shares that prospective purchasers of rights must act quickly."

Four Per Cent Dividend
A dividend of 4 per cent is payable to the stockholders of the Massachusetts Cotton mills, Feb. 10, as of record Jan. 21.

Merrimack Mfg. Co.
The 2 1/2 per cent dividend on the preferred stock of the Merrimack Manufacturing Co. is payable March 1 to stock of record Jan. 15.

The Merrimack print works will be closed next week. The print works shut down last Thursday and will not open until one week from next Monday.

The Middlesex Mills
The Middlesex mills are running three shifts, one day shift and two night shifts. No water had it appeared in the newspapers that the Middlesex mills were running nights than spinners and weavers from all points of the compass flocked into Lowell and the result was, three men for every job. But the spinners and weavers are a happy lot, as a whole, and a little thing which I said.

bloodshed will follow, which will startle the country. The magistrate asked Murphy if he had ever been arrested last night in those localities. Three cars west bound on South street were held by an obstruction at the east end of the drawbridge over the Schuylkill before, Murphy hesitated, and before he could reply police records were produced which showed that he had been arrested several years ago on a charge of selling policy. At this juncture Murphy interrupted the proceedings to say that he had not understood the magistrate's question and admitted that he had been arrested, but had been discharged.

Asst. Dist. Atty. Gray, in pleading to the magistrate to hold Murphy in custody, called attention to present conditions in the city and declared that the utterances of Murphy were serious enough to hold him on the charge of inciting to riot.

Murphy's counsel denied that Murphy had committed any offense, and asked for his client's discharge. The magistrate, however, held him for the action of the grand jury.

After the hearing, Murphy said: "I stand for everything the newspaper men said. I have nothing to take back and they can go to their limit on what I said."

Conditions were very quiet through the city up to noon, nothing beyond the scattered stoning of cars being reported from anywhere. The transit company says it is operating more cars on all lines. Strike leaders report the situation as satisfactory to them.

PRESIDENT TAFT

Wants Personnel of the Navy Improved

WASHINGTON, Feb. 26.—President Taft today sent a special message to congress urging legislation for the improvement of the personnel of the navy. The president's message outlines a bill prepared by Secy Meyer which would reduce the ages of the senior officers and re-organize the line.

The president declares that the line of the navy is an abnormal condition because of past legislation and that under conditions now existing young officers will have little opportunity for promotion for years to come. The president cites for example that from now on 160 officers will enter the junior Lieutenant's grade each year while only forty will be promoted out of it. The effect of the measure which Secretary Meyer has prepared and which the president approves will be to promote officers to the grade of captain at the average age of 46 or 47 years and to the grade of rear-admiral at the age of 54 to 55 and make the average of all rear admirals about 45.

IMPROVING RAPIDLY

LOOKING UP COLEMAN'S ACCOUNTS

BOSTON, Feb. 26.—The searchlight of investigation upon the tangled financial affairs of George W. Coleman, late book-keeper of the National City bank which closed its doors on Wednesday with a deficit of at least $160,000 and for which Coleman is held responsible, was turned on full force today. Receiver John L. Bates and Bank Examiner Pepper have a definite idea on the method of procedure and have already received 500 of the 800 pass books of the depositors. Without promising an immunity bath Receiver Bates sent word to Coleman that his assistance in straightening out the accounts would be appreciated, but no immediate reply was received. The criminal side of the case occupied the attention of both the federal and city authorities and Chief Hurley of the Cambridge force intimated today that he might follow up the numerous rumors that Coleman used the bank's money in an effort to break a safe bank. The chief went so far as to say that he had secured the names of a number of Boston sporting men with whom Coleman associated during the past year.

DARING ESCAPE

Of Prisoners Who Were Arrested in Lowell

Men Sawed Iron Bars in Hillsboro, N. H. and Escaped in Light Clothing—They Are Still at Large

Joseph Beauregard of Nashua, who broke into a store in Wilton, N. H., during the latter part of November of last year was arrested by Inspector John A. Walsh and Patrolman Matthew McCann a few days later in this city. Herbert L. Quimby, who escaped from Grasmere and was later arrested here by Inspector Martin A. Maher and Patrolman Bart. Ryan on December 18th, together with Patrick Brown of Manchester, yesterday made a most daring escape from the prison dormitory of the Hillsboro, N. H. county house of correction at Grasmere and are still at large.

Arrested in Lowell

Beauregard's escape, crippled as he was with a leg, which made walking doubly difficult in the snow, is regarded as the most desperate. He is one of the gang which broke into a clothing store at Wilton last fall and got away with a wagon load of clothing and other goods. In the complaint the amount of goods stolen was set at $219.95, but most of the goods were bulky. Another of the gang, Philip Boudreau, was sentenced to state prison, but Beauregard was let off with a year at Grasmere, in view of his past good record.

Long Term Men

All three were long term men. Beauregard was committed in January to serve a year for breaking and entering a clothing store in Wilton, N. H., the latter part of November; Brown was committed in December to serve nine months for drunkenness; and Quimby, who was committed in December to complete a six months' term for drunkenness, only a few days of which had been served, and a month additional for escaping from Grasmere last May.

Sensational Escape

The escape was one of the most sensational in the history of the institution. With a saw improvised from a steel table knife, notched with the aid of another knife, the men sawed off the iron bars five-eighths of an inch in diameter, bent back the bars so that they could crawl through, and then lowered themselves to the ground with a rope made of bedclothing. They then ran to the railroad track and hurried toward Hillsboro.

SEARCH INSTITUTED

Officers of the institution at once started out with lanterns and found the tracks of the men in the loose snow in the rear of the building. They were easily followed, as Beauregard's peg leg made a distinct mark in the snow. The trail was followed for some distance towards Manchester, but it was evident that the men had made all the haste possible in getting away, and they were not once sighted. The length of the strides showed that the men had run part of the way to keep themselves from freezing, as well as to get beyond reach of their pursuers.

Sign Painters, Notice

To relieve all our competitors anxiety in regard to the price we are receiving for the Electric Sign we are now building for the Jewel Theatre, wish to say we are getting more than any of the others figured and we are not actually frostbitten. Whether they found refuge with friends in town or jumped a freight train and got out of the city can only be conjectured. While they may have had outside help, and have been provided with clothing and shelter, there is no proof to show it.

The thermometer showed a temperature of 24 degrees below zero at the county farm at the time the men escaped, and although warmly clothed with overcoats, caps and gloves, the officers who pursued the fugitives suffered severely from the cold. They had expected to find the prisoners overcome by the cold and freezing when they trailed them toward the city. The men did not even take the jumpers and overalls worn as the prison uniform and had only ordinary jackets and trousers of light weight over their underclothing, light weight caps without earflaps and shoes. They wore without mittens or outside wraps unless they got some garments outside from some source unknown to the officers.

Kind competitors, don't think that the lowest man always gets the work; for from it. It is the one who can show the up-to-the-minute work; that is where we come in.

FOR STATE HIGHWAY

Dracut Citizens Boomed the Proposed Road

At a Largely Attended and Practically Unanimous Meeting Last Evening—Situation Explained by Rep. Holt of Methuen

That the people of Dracut are practically a unit for the proposed state highway from Lowell to Lawrence, along the north bank of the Merrimack river was demonstrated last evening when a mass meeting of the citizens of that town to discuss the project drew one of the largest crowds ever seen at a special meeting.

The principal speaker of the evening was Rep. Holt of Methuen, the "father" of the bill, and explained the matter in lucid and convincing manner, and when he had finished and had answered the questions put to him there was little opportunity left for opposition.

Lowell men presented a petition for the new road to the executive committee of the board of trade yesterday morning, and that committee, after deciding upon $3000 as all that they would advise Lowell's spending on it, voted to favor the project and to be represented before the hearing on Monday. The estimated cost as given by the county engineer shows that Lowell's share of the expense will be under $2500.

Chairman Fred A. Bassett of the selection presided over the hearing and stated the purpose of the gathering. He called attention to the presence of Rep. George H. Stevens of Dracut and Rep. Holt of Methuen, both of whom would speak to the meeting relative to the bill and legislation now pending.

Chairman Bassett introduced Rep. Stevens, who stated that his brother representative was better able to explain the merits of the matter to be discussed than he, the Methuen representative, which covered the project of a state highway over the river route, so-called.

Mr. Stevens asked the parties interested before the hearing on Monday. Continued to last page.

NEW YORK, Feb. 26.—It was learned today that the marriage license bureau in the city hall had been kept open after hours last night for the issuance of a marriage license to August Belmont and Eleanor Elise Robson, the actress; whose engagement was recently announced.

Mr. Belmont made the arrangement by telephone, but did not inform Chief Clerk Scully of his identity. Consequently the appearance of Mr. Belmont and Miss Robson, who motored down to the city hall, took the clerk by surprise. Because of the late hour, there were few persons about the bureau and the pair were not recognized by outsiders.

In the application for the license, which was issued in due form, Mr. Belmont gave his age as 57, while Miss Robson's was given as 31. The time and place of the marriage was not stated.

NEW HAVEN, Feb. 26.—The demands of the conductors and trainmen of the New Haven road which were turned down by General Manager Higgins, it is stated with authority, if granted would have cost considerably over a million dollars a year. The negotiations which are now in progress are covering every detail of the wage system of the two orders involving time, runs and money payments. The company is seeking to secure from the organizations of employees their lowest demands. This will be followed by the statement as to what terms the company is willing to grant and at that point the crisis will come. In the opinion of the higher officials of the railroad, however, it is not regarded that in any event there will be a strike. It is said that no matter what may be the results on other roads the New Haven company will grant some concessions.

LOOKING UP COLEMAN'S ACCOUNTS

BOSTON, Feb. 26.—The searchlight of investigation upon the tangled financial affairs of George W. Coleman, late book-keeper of the National City bank which closed its doors on Wednesday with a deficit of at least $160,000 and for which deficit Coleman is held responsible, was turned on full force today. Receiver John L. Bates and Bank Examiner Pepper have a definite idea on the method of procedure and have already received 500 of the 800 pass books of the depositors. Without promising an immunity bath Receiver Bates sent word to Coleman that his assistance in straightening out the accounts would be appreciated, but no immediate reply was received. The criminal side of the case occupied the attention of both the federal and city authorities and Chief Hurley of the Cambridge force intimated today that he might follow up the numerous rumors that Coleman used the bank's money in an effort to break a faro bank. The chief went so far as to say that he had secured the names of a number of Boston sporting men with whom Coleman associated during the past year.

Receiver Bates stated today that the $30,000 in securities which he carried away from the bank yesterday was slightly more than the amount shown to be in the bank's vaults in the last report of the bank's deficits on other accounts.

IN POLICE COURT

Boston Man Fined for Stealing Trousers

Lawrence Quirk, of Boston, who stole two pairs of trousers at the Rutnam & Sons Co. clothing store in Central street last Saturday night, was arraigned in police court this morning on a charge of larceny, and through his counsel, Lawyer John Quinn, of Boston, entered a plea of guilty, was found guilty and ordered to pay a fine of $15 within five days or the fine could be levied on his property. He was committed to the Lowell jail for three months.

Lawyer Quinn, who is known in and about Boston as "Honest John," informed the court that the young man was a member of a highly respectable family in Boston, but had started to drink of late and that the larceny was committed while he was in an intoxicated condition and not in full control of his senses.

He told the court that he thought if a fine were imposed it would be sufficient to cause his client to realize the seriousness of the offense and he felt that the young man would do better in the future.

Supt. Welch informed the court that he had communicated with the police of Boston and that he had no record on the city. Questioned by the court, Quirk said that about ten or twelve years ago he was arrested in Boston for malicious mischief.

After sentence was passed, Lawyer Quinn paid the fine and Quirk was allowed to go.

Neglected His Children

Adolph Volkeryk pleaded guilty to a complaint charging him with failing to provide proper support for his two minor children, Paul and Margaret. Mrs. Volkeryk said that she left her husband about a year ago owing to his habits and that since then she had been working in the mill and supporting the little ones.

The court said that he was willing to support his children if his wife would relinquish her claim to them and allow him to have them. This she refused to do, however, and the court felt that the children would receive better care from the mother than from the father.

Volkeryk was found guilty and ordered to pay $1 a week to his wife.

Threatened His Wife

Napoleon Champagne pleaded guilty to threatening his wife and was given a suspended sentence of four months in jail. He was represented by Lawyer Paul R. Charbonneau and Lawyer J. H. Guille appeared for the government.

Case Continued

The case of Michael Nowacki, charged with assault and battery on John J. Kelly, was continued till next Thursday.

Paul Mullen, charged with being drunk, was fined $5.

BEAN GOING HOME

The telegram was said to have been sent at the request of relatives of the missing man. When discovered yesterday, Bean was working at a shoe factory and was apparently unable to give any account of his wanderings since his left home on Jan. 31.

DARING ESCAPE Of Prisoners Who Were Arrested in Lowell

Men Sawed Iron Bars in Hillsboro, N. H. and Escaped in Light Clothing—They Are Still at Large

Joseph Beauregard of Nashua, who broke into a store in Wilton, N. H., during the latter part of November of last year was arrested by Inspector John A. Walsh and Patrolman Matthew McCann a few days later in this city; Herbert L. Quimby, who escaped from Grasmere and was later arrested here by Inspector Martin A. Maher and Patrolman Bart Ryan on December 18th, together with Patrick Brown of Manchester, yesterday made a most daring escape from the prison department of the Hillsboro, N. H. county house of correction at Grasmere and are still at large.

The police within a radius of 50 miles of Manchester have been notified of the escape, but at the present writing the men were still at large.

With the mercury standing at 24 degrees below zero the three men, thickly clad, sawed their way out of the prison and fled through the snow to the railroad tracks leading to Manchester, making good their escape. One of the men, Beauregard, was handcuffed with a peg leg, but successfully eluded the pursuers who were on the track of the prisoners shortly after they made their escape.

Long Term Men

All three were long term men. Beauregard was committed in January to serve a year for breaking and entering a clothing store in Wilton, N. H., the latter part of November; Brown was committed in December to serve nine months for drunkenness; and Quimby, who was committed in December to complete a six months' term for drunkenness, only a few days of which had been served, and a month additional for escaping from Grasmere last May.

Sensational Escape

The escape was one of the most sensational in the history of the institution. With a saw improvised from a steel table knife, notched with the aid of another knife, the men sawed off two iron bars two-eighths of an inch in diameter, but back the bars so that they could crawl through, and then lowered themselves to the ground with a rope made of bedclothing. They then ran to the railroad track and hurried toward Manchester.

The men occupied a dormitory on the second floor of the prison building, which stands beside the stable and near the railroad track. In the old-fashioned prison buildings to replace which the legislature has made an appropriation of $1,000,000, the men are not kept in cells, but are herded in dormitories. Eighteen other men occupied the apartment from which the escape was made. They were told to leave their coats and engage in the folly of escaping on such a night.

They claimed afterwards that they knew nothing about the escape until the watchmen discovered it and came in to investigate. One of the men, who was taken with skepticism by the officers of the institution, who have listened to prisoners' yarns before and who have no doubt that the other prisoners saw the men sawing out and kept silent through sympathy. Most of the men, however, refused to believe that they had been so stupid as to leave their warm coats and engage in the folly of escaping on such a night.

Search Instituted

Officers of the institution at once started out with lanterns and found the tracks of the men in the loose snow in the rear of the building. They were easily followed as Beauregard's peg leg made a distinct mark in the snow. The trail was followed for some distance towards Manchester, but it was evident that the men had made all the haste possible in getting away, and they were not once stopped. The length of the escape showed that the men had run part of the way to keep themselves from freezing, as well as to get beyond reach of their pursuers.

As far as could be ascertained from an investigation yesterday the men had no extra clothing and must have suffered bitterly from the cold. If they were not actually frostbitten. Whether they found refuge with friends in town or jumped a freight train and got out of the city can only be conjectured. While they may have had outside help, and have been provided with clothing and shelter, there is no proof to show it.

The thermometer showed a temperature of 21 degrees below zero at the county farm at the time the men escaped, and although warmly clothed with overcoats, caps and gloves, the of scarcely who pursued the fugitives suffered severely from the cold. They had expected to find the prisoners overcome by the cold and freezing when they trailed them toward the city. The men did not even take the jumpers and overalls worn as the prison uniform and had only ordinary jackets and trousers of light weight over their underclothing, light weight caps without mittens or outside wraps unless they got some garments outside from some source unknown to the officers.

Arrested in Lowell

Beauregard's escape, crippled as he was with a peg leg, which made walking doubly difficult in the snow, is regarded as the most desperate. He is one of the gang which broke into a clothing store at Wilton last fall and got away with a wagon load of clothing and other goods. In the complaint the amount of goods stolen was set at $219.95, but most of the goods were bulky. Another of the gang, Philip Boudreau, was sentenced to state prison, but Beauregard was let off with a year at Grasmere, in view of his past good record.

Quimby, who escaped once before, was captured in Lowell last December. It is suspected that he was the ringleader in yesterday morning's break.

Beauregard and Boudreau were arrested in this city by Inspector Walsh and Patrolman McCann during the early part of December. The police had considerable difficulty in locating the clothing store, but finally located the room where the goods were stored and succeeded in recovering nearly everything that had been taken.

Quimby's first appearance in the Lowell court was during the early part of December of last year when he was found guilty of stealing a pair of shoes. His young wife appeared in his behalf and after making a strong plea for clemency for her husband Judge Hadley imposed a small fine and he was allowed to go.

Quimby did not know it at the time he was before the court. Quimby was after escaping from Grasmere and was wanted by the New Hampshire authorities. A week or more later a description of Quimby was sent to Lowell and he was arrested by Inspector Maher and Patrolman Ryan and turned over to the New Hampshire officials.

NIGHT EDITION PINCHOT'S STORY

He Charges Secretary Ballinger With Falsehood

WASHINGTON, Feb. 26.—Gifford Pinchot, taking the witness stand at the Ballinger-Pinchot inquiry this afternoon, read a statement to the committee before being sworn, in which he charged Secretary Ballinger with falsehood and distortion in evidence and declared that Secretary Ballinger should be dismissed from the service.

Mr. Pinchot made to the Ballinger-Pinchot investigating committee this statement of his charges against Secretary Ballinger.

"What I desire to lay before the committee is a consecutive story of my experiences with Mr. Ballinger in relation to the conservation of natural resources. Among several other matters there are three of principal importance to be called to your attention. The first of these concerns the policy devised and inaugurated by the last administration of protecting against monopolistic control the water-power sites owned by the president. I shall show you that Secretary Ballinger, in his office with the clear determination to make short work of that policy, that he reversed it so far as he was allowed to do so; that he restored the power sites to entry without the remotest idea of re-withdrawing them, and that finally, when I charged him last autumn to the president with being an enemy of the policy of conservation he capped the climax by giving to the president himself an explanation of his conduct that was essentially false.

"The second has to do with my connection as a government official with the Cunningham coal mines and with the Glavis charges. I shall show you how the forest service became involved in these cases and how Glavis submitted his facts to me. I believe then, as I believe now, that he told the truth. "I am convinced, as was when he came to me, that Glavis was a faithful public servant, and that the facts which he presented prove that Mr. Ballinger has been unfaithful to his trust as a servant of the people and as the guardian of public property of enormous value.

"I shall show you that since I learned the facts you have heard from Glavis and others which I am about to lay before you, I have noted steadily in the light of them as it was when he came to me, that Glavis was a faithful public servant, and that the facts which he presented prove that Mr. Ballinger has been unfaithful to his trust as a servant of the people and as the guardian of public property of enormous value.

"I shall show you that this letter was submitted by the president to Mr. Ballinger and that as part of his reply he told before the president a story of Glavis' conduct which was entirely untrue.

"The third principal matter is concerned with the attitude of this government in law and administrative practice toward the conservation of the natural resources belonging to the people. I desire to show you that the story of Glavis' conduct and the successful fight to protect the property of the people which ended in his dismissal without a hearing is but a single chapter in the history of the public lands. I shall show you that under the present system the betrayal into monopolistic control of what belongs to all of us is made easy and often, in the case of the public lands, it is made a matter of course.

"Your duty toward this country is not only to get rid of an unfaithful public servant. A far more greater duty is to bring about a fundamental change in the law and practice toward conservation to prevent in the future what has been in the past almost inevitable sacrifice of the public welfare and to make possible hereafter the utilization of natural resources and the natural advantages for the benefit of all the people instead of merely for the profit of a few.

"When this story has been told and the witnesses whom I shall ask you to call have been heard, you will realize that the interests of the people are not safe in Mr. Ballinger's hands and that the country will demand of this committee a verdict in harmony with the general conviction that the secretary of the interior has been unfaithful both to the public whose property he has endangered and to the president, whom he has deceived."

When he had concluded his statement Mr. Pinchot was sworn. His counsel, George P. Fisher of Philadelphia, undertook the direct examination. It began with a statement of Mr. Pinchot's services to the government. The witness told of the growth of the forest service since he was first connected with it. Mr. Pinchot said he first entered the service in 1896 under Secretary Hoke Smith, as a special agent of the land office to inspect forest reserves. Mr. Pinchot said that Mr. Ballinger as commissioner of the land office protested against the creation of the Chugach forest reserve in Alaska. This protest as Mr. Pinchot said included most of the Cunningham coal claims.

The contract for co-operative agreement calling for co-operation between the interior department and forest service arranged by Sec'y Wilson of the department of agriculture and former Secretary of Interior Garfield was introduced in evidence. This contract was abrogated by Sec'y Ballinger last year.

THE BIG BOUT

May Not Take Place in 'Frisco

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 26.—That it is by no means certain yet that the Jeffries-Johnson fight will be staged in or around San Francisco became known last night, when it was learned that negotiations are about to be reopened with Salt Lake City with a view of ascertaining if the big battle could not be held there. That the promoters of the fight have not met with the reception here they had hoped for and that they are not entirely agreed as to the course to pursue has been apparent and thus set in various rumors of another split between Ted Rickard and Jack Gleason and intimations that extortionate demands are made for a place for an arena. Last night it was said that Rickard, becoming dissatisfied, had reopened negotiations with Salt Lake City, Rickard's denial notwithstanding, and it was learned that representatives from Salt Lake would be here in a day or two, among them J. Langford, manager of the Salt Air pavilion, who is coming in response to a telegram from Rickard. While not denying that matters were not entirely satisfactory, neither promoter would make a statement.

MAY USE AMPHITHEATRE

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah, Feb. 26.—In response to a telegram from Ted Rickard asking for further conference concerning the use of the Salt Air amphitheatre for the Jeffries-Johnson fight, J. E. Langford, manager of the Salt Air pavilion, who is coming in response to a telegram from Rickard, while not denying that matters were not entirely satisfactory, neither promoter would make a statement.

MYSTERY TABLE

FOR COMING FAIR WAS GIVEN BOOST LAST EVENING

An entertainment in aid of the mystery table for the coming Grace Universal fair to be held at the Highland club March 1, was given in the church vestry last night. There were fourteen tableaux, altogether, as follows: "The Knitted Sweater," Miss Helen Spencer; "Karo Corn Syrup," Leslie Pullen; "Pecker's Tar Soap," Marjory and Stuart Murphy; "Kingsford's Corn Starch," Dorothy Harris; "Hind's Almond Cream," Miss Clara Shay; "Jap Rose Soap," Miss Marie Richardson; "Peet-Eyes," Miss Miriam Murphy; "Cuticura Soap," Miss Gertrude White; "Pearline," Miss Gertrude White; "Old Dutch Dish Soap," Miss Linda Weinbeck; "Baker's Excelsior," Miss Carlotta Abels; "Jelle," Miss Olga Shay; "Red Cross Nurse," Miss Marion Martin; and "Uneda Bleusette," Stuart Murphy.

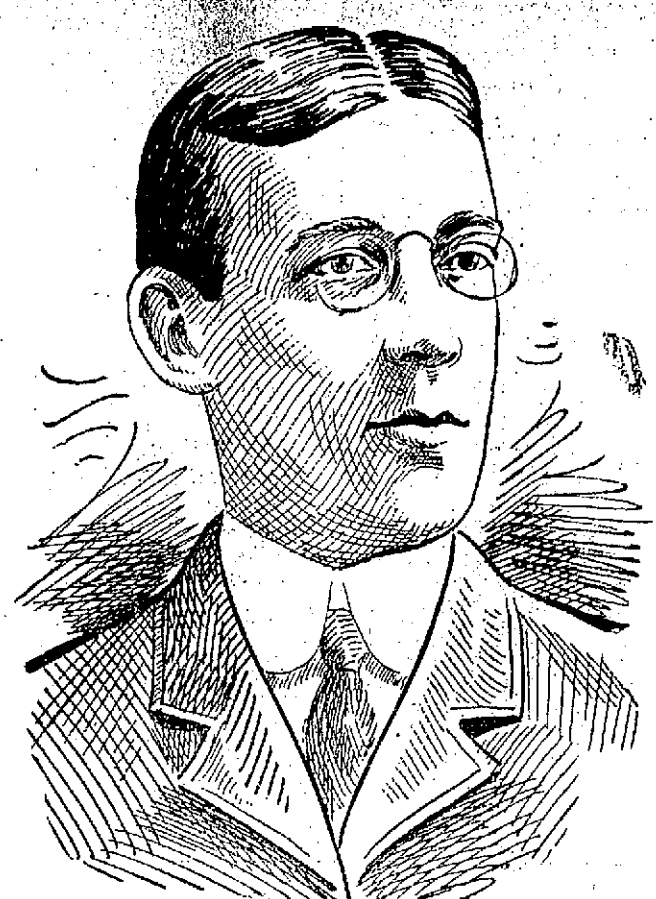

During the intermission Miss Mina Brooks gave readings, and Miss Ella Perham played the piano. The closing part of the entertainment was devoted to the little one act comedy entitled "The Truth About Jane." The cast of characters was as follows: "William," Gertrude Weinbeck; "Cornelia," Edna Decker; "Madeline," Linda Weinbeck; "Baker's Excelsior," Miss Carlotta Abels; "Jelle," Miss Olga Shay; "Red Cross Nurse," Miss Marion Martin; and "Uneda Bleusette," Stuart Murphy.

A candy table did a thriving business.

FINE GIFTS

FOR JOSEPH M. DONOGHUE LAST EVENING

A genuine surprise and presentation of gifts was accorded Mr. Joseph M. Donoghue at his home, 4 Hazelton street last evening when a party of 40 of his young friends called to tender him a farewell reception. Mr. Donoghue is to assume an important clerical position in the consular bureau of the department of commerce and labor at Washington on March 1 and hence the gathering at his home. When the gathering arrived Miss Florence Kane presented in a few well chosen words an elegant watch, gold chain and a gold bracelet. Mr. Donoghue, John E. Quinn, with appropriate remarks, presented a dress suit case. Mr. Donoghue spoke briefly in appreciation of the gifts saying he would never forget the donors. There were, planned by Mr. Thomas O'Hare, John A. Quinn, Joseph Donohue and John J. Gilbride, Jr., and songs by Miss Margaret J. O'Donoghue, Miss May Dunn, Thomas O'Hare, Miss Annabel McLaughlin, Miss May Barry, Miss Gertrude Holden and Miss Ethel Rowe. Refreshments were given by Arthur Cull and William J. O'Donoghue. Refreshments were served. The party broke up at a reasonable hour, wishing every success to Mr. Donoghue in his new field of work.

THE LATE COL. THOS. TALBOT

At Funeral of Lieut. Col. Thos. Talbot

Arrangements for the burial of the late Lieut. Col. Thomas Talbot have not been completed as yet, owing to the absence of the family in New York, who have gone to accompany the remains back to Boston, but it has been decided to hold a military funeral from the Arlington street church in Boston, probably Monday noon, and the remains will then be brought to this city for interment in the family lot in the Lowell cemetery.

Revenue Collector Resumes Old Position

Aaron S. Thompson, who recently resigned his position as deputy collector of internal revenue for this district to accept a position with the C. B. Coburn Co., was reappointed to the federal position this week, having resigned from the Coburn company after a brief experience.

WORLD WIDE TRIP

To Bring Murderer Back to Lynn

LYNN, Feb. 26.—It will probably be decided today whether or not Police Inspector Stacey R. Burckes and Deputy Sheriff Wells will go to Bulgaria to bring back Valon Nalbadian, the alleged murderer of Minas K. Monjian, who is at present being held in the European capital pending the completion of the extradition process. Both Deputy Sheriff Wells and Inspector Burckes have for some days been looking up the itinerary of the contemplated trip, and it has been practically decided how they will take the journey over. How they will come back will not be decided until they get there and talk the matter over with the American consul.

So far as is known, this is the first time in the history of the Commonwealth when extradition has been sought for a foreigner in Bulgaria. Usually, if an alleged criminal makes his escape to one of the countries between Russia and Germany no efforts are made to bring him back, especially if the crime committed is one between foreigners. In the case of Nalbadian, however, it has seemed to be the right policy to follow the case to the limit. Nalbadian had money and a lawyer he might fight extradition for some time and it might be very difficult to get him. But none of these obstacles are expected. He has admitted his identity, the most important admission in the extradition process, and there seems to be no valid reason why he should not be brought back. The only hitch that might come in getting Nalbadian over to the states will come in crossing other countries which have no treaty with the United States after Bulgaria is left behind.

If the two officials take the trip, Dist. Atty. Peters will let them know today, in all probability. They will leave Lynn in that case, Tuesday, for New York, and will sail on the Mauretania for Liverpool. From Liverpool they will go to London, thence to Paris by rail to Vienna and down the Danube to Bucharest, a city in Roumania. Roland G. Harvey is consul there. But it will be in Sofia, capital of Bulgaria, that the work of getting the formal processes served will be done. This will be done through the American embassy. After the papers are granted the Lynn officials will go to Silistria, another city in Bulgaria, and get their man.

Every precaution will be made to get Nalbadian out of Bulgaria and into some country which has a treaty with this country. Turkey, Russia, Serbia, and such countries will be avoided as much as possible, as officials in those countries might prevent the Lynn men from taking their man away.

As Inspector Burckes explained it, there might not be any opposition in those countries, but in this case it would be an act of grace. There is no law or treaty to compel these countries to give up any man in their boundaries or to allow a man to be taken through these countries under arrest. Mr. Burckes thinks it might be possible to get a hint at Bucharest and sail down the Danube to the Black sea, thence change to a Mediterranean sailing boat and get to Gibraltar. This is probably the return route which will be taken. If the overland route were taken back through the American embassy, Roumania and a part of Serbia before reaching Austria, which has a treaty with the United States, so far as can be judged, from a rough estimate, the proposed trip will necessitate travel to the extent of about 15,000 miles. It is 540 miles from New York to Liverpool and 400 miles from New York to Paris. It is 4700 miles from New York to Vienna by the way of London. From Vienna the trip into Bulgaria after Nalbadian will add about 750 miles more. If the return is made by way of

Will Try to Limit Lords' Veto Power

LONDON, Feb. 26.—The Daily Telegraph asserts that the cabinet has abandoned all idea of reforming the house of lords, and will now direct its whole energies to limiting the veto power of the lords. In this, the Telegraph says the government will proceed by bill, may by resolution first and bill afterwards, as originally intended. This concession to the Radicals will not satisfy the Redmonites, the paper thinks, because the ministers have not yet decided to put the veto question before the budget.

The Radical Chronicle partly confirms the foregoing by stating that the government resolutions will deal with the veto, leaving the question of the reform of the house of lords for future consideration.

TEXTILE SCHOOL

ANNUAL DANCE OF GAMA CHAPTER AT COLONIAL HALL

Colonial hall was the scene of a very delightful party last night, the event being the annual dance of the Gama chapter of the Phi Psi fraternity of the Textile school. The affair was largely attended by members and friends of the organization and there were many guests present from out of town.

The hall was prettily decorated, the fraternity colors, black and yellow, predominating. A large replica of the fraternity pin, done in electric lights and hung over the centre of the stage, was the hub of the scheme.

Hibbard's orchestra furnished music and at intermission refreshments were served. The patronesses who occupied a cosy corner of the hall were Mrs. C. Cunnock, Mrs. Henry P. Ford, Mrs. L. W. Faulkner, Mrs. Stephen E. Smith, Mrs. Arthur A. Stewart, Mrs. Fenwick Umpleby.

The reception committee was: Mr. George Cogswell Welch, Mr. Carl E. Bailey, Mr. John H. Hutton, Mr. Alfred Huggins, Alfred Walker, Norman D. Reed, Carl E. Bailey, George Cogswell Welch, Henry H. Harrison, James S. Goodwin, William W. Watson, Walter E. Kehew, Howard M. Blake, Samuel McCleary, Ralph B. Clark, W. W. Waterman, Leopoldo Hureado, Jr., Prescott F. Higelow, Theophilus G. Smith, Jr., Fred T. Phillips, Walter L. Santry, Miles E. Rogers, Edwin M. Crane.

The active members of the local chapter are: Irving N. Stronach, Ernest C. Hay, Albert A. Hodgkins, Everett B. Rich, Woodbury K. Howe, Harold C. Huggins, John H. Hutton, Carl Huggins, Alfred Walker, Norman D. Reed, Carl E. Bailey, George Cogswell Welch, Henry H. Harrison, James S. Goodwin, William W. Watson, Walter E. Kehew, Howard M. Blake, Samuel McCleary, Ralph B. Clark, W. W. Waterman, Leopoldo Hureado, Jr., Prescott F. Higelow, Theophilus G. Smith, Jr., Fred T. Phillips, Walter L. Santry, Miles E. Rogers, Edwin M. Crane.

Mr. Thompson has always been used to outside work and he found the confinement of the indoor position at Coburn's detrimental to his health, and hence resigned.

Since his resignation from the federal position not only Congressman Ames but the members of the local legislative delegation have been besieged by the friends of the candidates for the position, and the announcement that Mr. Thompson is to return to the federal job will come as a big surprise to the hustling candidates, while Congressman Ames will be permitted to breathe easy again. Mr. Thompson is a candidate for the position.

HER SON DEAD

Mother Locked Boy in a Room

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Feb. 26.—Mrs. W. H. Guinness locked her unruly ten-year-old boy, Gerald S. Guinness, in an upper room of her house on Sexton street this afternoon while she went to a store. When she returned she found the lad lying on the floor of the room, dead. Gas was flowing from the open jet on the wall. The mother rushed for a doctor but nothing could be done. Later Medical Examiner Griffin viewed the remains and pronounced death due to an accident. The boy's mother is grief-stricken.

MRS. CURTIS DEAD

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 26.—Mrs. Cyrtus H. Curtis, wife of the publisher of the Ladies' Home Journal, and editor of the magazine from 1883 to 1889, died yesterday at her home in Wyn-cote.

For many years Mrs. Curtis was closely identified with the publishing business and took an active part in the development of the Ladies' Home Journal in its early years. Edward W. Bok succeeded Mrs. Curtis as editor in chief of the magazine in 1889, and since that time she has had nothing to do with the business.

Mrs. Curtis, whose death was unexpected, was 55 years old. She was in good health until a short time ago. She was Miss Louisa Knapp of Boston. She came to Philadelphia with her husband during the Centennial exposition, and they had since made this city their home.

Won the Decision From Jack Johnson

BROOKTON, Feb. 26.—Honey Melody of Charlestown showed something of his old time form in his 12 round ring debate with Young Jack Johnson, a Boston brunette, before the Union A. C. in this city last night, winning the decision by a mile. There were 600 present, including many from Boston, to cheer Melody, and the decision was a popular one, Melody appearing to be a big favorite.

Before the match it was said that he was going back and that he had lost his punch. But his work in the ring seemed to be against this contention, for in the 11th and 12th rounds it was Melody who did the leading, Melody who forced Johnson to give ground and take severe punishment, and he wound up fresh and with wind to spare. A match with Tommy Quill, the Brockton lightweight, has been suggested as the next event for Melody.

In the early match the better of the argument all through the bout, setting the pace for the first six rounds as well as the finish. Johnson was game, however, and took punishment without flinching. The seventh and eighth rounds were the two in which Johnson seemed to get the best of the fight.

Toddle Murphy of Randolph and Frank Maloney of Boston went six rounds to a draw in a preliminary. Young Whitney of Rockland, who is said to be a corner, stopped Young Ashport of Brockton in two rounds.

CALLER DRAW

LEWISTON, Me., Feb. 26.—Before the Armory Athletic club at city hall last night, Gus Larabee of Lewiston and Al Limerick of Haverhill, Mass., fought six hotly contested rounds to a draw. In the third Larabee landed a hard left on Limerick's chin which knocked him. Limerick showed much cleverness in evading Larabee's blows and swings, his fast foot work being especially noticeable.

In the semi-final Young Porter of Auburn knocked out Kid Gagnon of Lewiston in the fifth round of what was the six-round bout.

In the preliminaries Shadow McCormick and Joe Chartrand, both of Lewiston, went six rounds to a draw, and Timmy Breen of Lewiston and Young Garneau, both of Lewiston, fought six rounds, honors going to Breen.

FRANKIE NEIL LOST

BALTIMORE, Feb. 25.—In the 13th round of a scheduled 15 round bout before the Burka Athletic Club last night the police ordered the fight stopped and Willie Jones of Brooklyn McKenney twice and got a third decision over Terry Martin and knocked out Willie Lewis in four rounds. Joe Thomas, Frank Mantell and Mike Twin Sullivan were the only men who have defeated him in recent years. Melody weighs 145 pounds, about Moriaty's weight. Jimmie has been coming along like a race horse since he re-entered the ring and there was talk of sending him against Jimmie Gardner or some of the big ones. Some of the members of the Gladstone club thought, however, that Jim ought to tackle some one who is a skilled boxer as well as a wallower before going abroad for the top-notchers and the matchmaker of the club has acted promptly on the suggestion. If Jimmie Moriaty can defeat Honey Melody in a six round bout, the opening bout will be of six rounds between Kid Mack and Kid Walsh of this city at 120 pounds. Kid Murray has been seen in the local ring before, while Kid Mack makes his first professional appearance. Those who have seen black go say that he is a corner. It is a sparring partner of Freddie Maguire and has much of Freddie's cleverness. There will be a six round bout between Young Murray of this city and Young Kennedy of Lawrence, while the semi-final will be of eight rounds between Connie Barnes of Lowell and Jack O'Brien of Lawrence. As usual, the meeting will be for members only.

WRESTLING BOUT

Maupas Beat Killonis at Graeco-Roman

One of the most entertaining wrestling matches ever held in this city drew a fair sized gathering to Associate hall last evening when Emile Maupas, the Canadian heavyweight, met and defeated John Killonis, champion middleweight of the west, mixed style wrestling. The crowd of about 1000, in Graeco-Roman style, at which he is a past master, and Killonis taking one at catch-as-catch-can, Maupas weighed about 180, while Killonis weighed 160. The Greek style was claimed that he was unfamiliar with Graeco-Roman wrestling, and hence was at a disadvantage. Killonis took the first fall, catch-as-catch-can, in 27 minutes, while Maupas got the second in 15, Graeco-Roman. The man making his fall in the shorter time had the privilege of naming the style of the third session, and hence Maupas decided upon Graeco-Roman. The match was as clean as a whistle and spectacular in the extreme. Every old kind of a hold was shown and likewise all sorts of head springs and bridges, for neither man was wearing a singlet throughout. In the Graeco-Roman style Maupas did a head hold stunt on his opponent that brought the crowd to its feet and was worth the price of admission. Grasping Killonis about the head with both arms, he lifted him off the mat and swung him around in a sort of whirling dervish, for almost a minute, finally dropping him face foremost on the mat. Both winner and loser were cheered by the well satisfied crowd. After the match Killonis stated that he was in had an excellent Roman, but would put up money for a match with Maupas, catch-as-catch-can style.

In the preliminaries, Jim Pappas defeated John Valls in straight falls, and John Pastakopoulos won over Chris Connors. Two little fellows nicknamed Sampson and Sadow gave an amusing exhibition.

James Prokes refereed the preliminary bouts, and John Brittsie, the main event, George V. Touhey, who was scheduled to referee, telegraphed at the last moment that he was unable to be present for him to be present.

DARTMOUTH STUDENTS

Had Narrow Escape From Death This Morning

Fire in Dormitory Caused Loss of $60,000 — The Blaze Started From Crossed Wires—Students Lost All Their Personal Effects

HANOVER, N. H., Feb. 26.—Many narrow escapes from death featured a spectacular fire which drove over fifty Dartmouth students from their beds in dormitory South Fayerweather and totally destroyed the building early today, causing a loss estimated at $60,000. That no one was injured is considered miraculous as the flames swept through the building with great rapidity, forcing a number of the students to jump from the windows into the snow. Others made ropes of blankets and bedclothes and lowered themselves to the ground. The temperature was hovering about 20 degrees below and the suffering of the scantily clad young men was extreme. They were hustled to shelter in nearby apartments.

The blaze started from crossed wires in the basement in the dormitory a four story square brick structure at the corner of Wheelock street and Fayerweather yard. Discovering the flames the night watchman sounded the alarm but before the sleeping students could make their way down stairs the fire had swept up through the airshaft and shut off escape by the interior of the building.

In less than half an hour the dormitory had been consumed, only the brick walls remaining. Hanover's fire department is a small one and the fire had gained such headway when the apparatus arrived that the flames could not be checked so the firemen only worked to prevent it from spreading. Nearly all the student body at the college witnessed the fire.

South Fayerweather hall was built but two years ago. It cost $35,000. All the personal effects of the students were lost.

PREMIER ASQUITH

Had an Audience With King Edward Today

LONDON, Feb. 25.—Premier Asquith had an audience with King Edward at Buckingham palace today and the circumstances have given rise to many fantastic reports. The fact seems to be that the premier after yesterday's cabinet council asked for today's audience of the object of acquainting his majesty with the proposed modifications of the government's attitude toward the principal questions dealt with in the speech from the throne. That modifications of the cabinet's original plans have been forced by the rebellious radicals and nationalists is not to be doubted but the cabinet is represented as having decided not to countenance the demands of the extremists that all mention of a reform of the house of lords should be dropped from the government's plans. The ministerial view, or at least the view of an important section of the ministry, is that if its program is confined to a proposal on the question of veto power and simple, it would in effect be a proposal for a single chamber government to which plan the country would be opened. In all probability therefore judging from present indications, a plan for the limitation of the lords' veto will be coupled with a reconstitution scheme in which the elective principle will be substituted for the hereditary principle. The ministerialists consider an elective versus an hereditary principle a good battle cry with which they may appeal to the country when the time comes for an election which is inevitable before their proposals can be embodied in the constitution.

Today's cabinet council was prolonged unusually. The ministers reviewed the news with which to reach a final decision on the plans to be represented in the house of commons on Monday when they will be obliged to come into close grip with the question of finance and the veto power of the lords. Subsequently Premier Asquith and most of the other members of the cabinet left to spend the week-end in the country where they will be out of the reach of the "rebels" whose harrassing during the past week has made life burdensome for them.

TYNGSBORO FAIR

Closed Last Evening, a Grand Success

The second evening's entertainment of the Tyngsboro V. I. A. fair drew another large and thoroughly pleased gathering to the town hall. The second presentation of "The Village Schoolhouse" was even better than its predecessor, for it proceeded smoother and everyone was right at home in his or her part. Miss J. L. Downing in the title role gave a most artistic interpretation of the part. Mr. and Mrs. Paul Noble were unanimously voted to be as clever as any professionals that Tyngsboro has ever seen.

GIFFORD PINCHOT

Likely to Make an Attack on Secretary Ballinger

WASHINGTON, Feb. 26.—The crowd of spectators which has been following the Gifford-Pinchot hearing gathered in great numbers at the senate office building this morning with the expectation of seeing Gifford Pinchot take the stand today and explain his dealings with Mr. Ballinger. Mr. Pinchot, it is said, spent much time in the preparation of his examination on the witness stand.

It was announced last night that he would call a number of witnesses to bring out charges that it was said he would make against Mr. Ballinger, especially with regard to the disposition of water power sites. Mr. Pinchot also will do all that he can, it is predicted, to substantiate Mr. Glavis.

It was not definitely known until today just what course Mr. Pinchot would pursue, but it is evident from the announcements that have been made as coming from the former chief forester that he will make an attack upon the secretary of the interior second only to that of Glavis himself.

SECRETARY WARD RESIGNS
WASHINGTON, Feb. 26.—George Cabot Ward, secretary of state of Porto Rico, has resigned that post, effective April 1.

STOCK MARKET

TREND OF OPENING MOVEMENT OF STOCKS

Decline Caused When Reading Was Bid Up a Point—The Market Closed Weak and Active

NEW YORK, Feb. 26.—The trend of the opening price movement of stocks was downwards on dull dealings, but there were enough exceptions to give slight irregularity to the movement. U. S. Steel, Central and Am. Smelt. declined 5-8 and Am. Sugar 1 1/2. Long Island sold at an advance of 1 1/2 and International Harvester 3/4.

The decline in the market ceased when Reading was bid up a point but the improvement in the active stocks did not hold. Reading, falling again to below yesterday's closing and the whole market, weakening sharply. A number of obscure stocks, made material advances, U. S. Express and Am. Arbor jumping five points, the preferred 10, Virginia-Carolina Chemical 3 1/2 and International Harvester 3. American Smelting fell 1 1/2. International Paper 1 1/2. St. Paul 1 1/2. Union Pacific, Canadian Pacific, Louisville & Nashville and Republic Steel 1. The market closed weak and active. Anticipation of a week bank return prompted sales of stock. Reading ran off 2 3/4; Louisville & Nashville 2 5/8; Consolidated Gas 2 and many other stocks one or more points. Am. bonds rose 3 over yesterday and the preferred stock reacted 5.

From Headaches or Dizziness? Do Your Eyes Blur While Reading? Do They Run Water?

If you go on allowing your eyes to blur, smart, burn, water and inflame, you must take the consequences. These symptoms are nature's signals of distress, and you disregard them at your peril.

It is you who are to blame. It is you who must suffer the consequences.

Your eyes have asked for help many times and been denied. They have worked patiently for you since childhood and in return you have abused them. Now it is "up to you."

Perhaps the trouble can be corrected now with right glasses. Tomorrow or next week the mischief may be done, and I would have to say to you "Too late." Will you delay longer or will you see me this very day? Office open Sundays, 2 to 5 p.m.

Pretty Hats From Paris

satin ribbon of a delicious pale rose pink is draped about the crown and tied in an Alsatian bow at the side, from which depend ends that hang to the end of milady's curls that fall below her shoulders. At the side, immediately above the flat bow, is a choux of moss green velvet, the unusual French touch that sets a Rue de la Paix creation miles away from those of less aristocratic origin. This bonnet in a smart New York establishment is valued at $25, and a five dollar bill or less will produce the same sort of creation if made at home.

The Dutch bonnet still finds favor in the juvenile showing of spring millinery, and the example illustrated is good looking in the extreme. The foundation is a leghorn flat of medium size, shaped into the semblance of the bonnets worn by the peasantry in the land of windmills, tulips and pretty Holland maidens. Very likely the Princess Juliana, the tiny girl who some day is destined to rule over Holland, will wear a bonnet like this season somewhat on the order of the creation we are describing, for her royal mother has a decided penchant for the native costume of her subjects. But, to return to the Dutch bonnet under discussion, it is trimmed with narrow rubbings of pink chiffon, very full and tightly gathered, that follow the outline of the bonnet shape. Satin ribbon in a little deeper tone of pink and a bunch of rosebuds nestle at one side of this fascinating piece of millinery. The ties are of the satin ribbon.

sunbonnet. A wire frame or one of milliner's canvas is first covered with white chiffon. Over the crown is arranged loosely a covering of hand embroidered handkerchief linen of the sheerest quality, delicately worked in oylet holes and tiny sprays of flowers. Then the floppy brim is adjusted, the inner facing being of plaited lace and the outer covering of the hand embroidered linen buttonholed at the edge in dainty scallops. Wide, soft

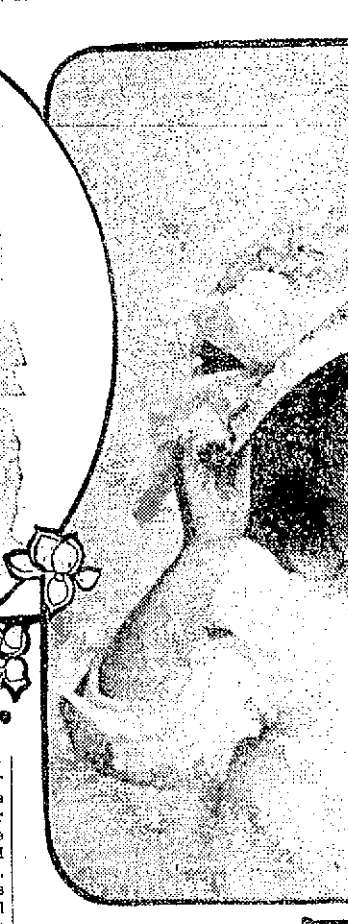

More on the grownup style is the inverted basin shaped hat worn by our dainty model. The straw is of the fancy tuscan variety in straw color with cabochon ornaments of the same material that in their highly polished state resemble big pear shaped pearls. And, in passing, I would say that this tuscan braid may be purchased in all widths, colors and patterns, and, given a frame, the making of such a creation as the one I am exploiting is an easy matter. Frills of plaited white shirred chiffon are put on the brim in a flat banded effect. Across the front of the fetching little chapeau is drawn carefully a band of white satin ribbon that finishes at one side with a long loop and fish tailed end and at the other side with a big, smart bow of the same ribbon. A small bunch of arbutus is artistically placed a little to the right of the front, directly above the large satin bow.

In knockabout hats there is so far nothing very different from those seen last spring and summer. The basin shapes and funny little replicas of models worn by grownups are the advance ideas one sees in the shops. It is, however, early in the season to predict about the hats our manufacturers will turn out for our approval later on. Paris sends over the expensive creations with success written all over them, and there is no escape from their fascination; but, as I said, the shapes for everyday chapeaux are still problematical.

In frocks the long waisted French style with full short skirt is to be a favorite for girls from three to six years of age. And in gingham and flannels the older girls will wear the Russian blouse gowns defined at the waist with patent leather belts. For everyday dresses worn by the small girl it is a good idea to cut the sleeves in one piece with the dress by prolonging the shoulder seam to the desired length of the sleeve (just above the elbow) and shaping it to form a kimono effect. The shoulder seam and the entire back of the dress are left open and finished with buttons and buttonholes, which may be made to button invisibly or to lend their aid in trimming the garment.

Such a frock does up beautifully and is a source of perpetual joy to the laundress. CATHERINE TALBOT.

Meals Without Meat

Appetizing Variations In the Cooking of Familiar Vegetables

NOW that the prices of meat are so high many housewives are arranging their meals without meat or are substituting some vegetable dish to take its place. Among the dishes without meat which will not be found wanting by those who are devoted to flesh food are the following:

QUAKER CABBAGE.

Take a medium sized fresh head of cabbage and cut into quarters, discarding the outer green leaves. Cut out the heart, wash and drain dry. Put into a kettle and cover with boiling water to which a tablespoonful of salt and a scant teaspoonful of soda have been added. After it commences to boil remove the cover and cook rapidly for twenty-five minutes. When tender pour off the water and drain in a colander, pressing with a plate to get out every drop of water. Put back in the kettle with a tablespoonful of butter and a large teaspoonful of flour stirred together. Add a scant teaspoonful of salt, a little pepper and a half cupful of milk. Let the milk boil up through the cabbage, cutting through several times with a knife, then remove from the fire and serve.

CELERY PATTIES.

Wash the celery and cut in half inch pieces, boil until tender and drain. Add two tablespoonfuls of butter and season with salt and pepper, then fill, bake in patty shells and put in a brisk oven for five minutes. Serve with a sauce made of one-half cup of the celery water, one cup of milk, three tablespoonfuls each of butter and flour and add salt to taste.

SQUASH FRITTERS.

To two cups of mashed dry winter squash add one cup of milk, two well beaten eggs, one teaspoonful of salt, a little pepper and one heaping teaspoon of baking powder. Beat well and drop by spoonfuls into hot butter or cooking oil and dry.

POTATOES WITH CHEESE.

Split Irish potatoes which have been baked and sprinkle with grated cheese, return to the oven long enough for the cheese to melt. Serve hot.

FISH SOUFFLE.

Make a white sauce of two tablespoonfuls of butter, two tablespoonfuls of flour, one cupful of milk, salt and pepper to taste and one teaspoonful of onion juice. When cooked pour over two eggs with the yolks well beaten, then add one cupful of whitefish steamed twenty minutes and flaked. When slightly cooled add two eggs with the whites stiffly beaten. Bake from twenty to thirty minutes.

LOBSTER CREOLE.

Have ready one heaping pint of lobster meat, fresh or canned. Heat one tablespoonful of butter, add one tablespoonful of chopped onion, one green pepper seeded and chopped fine and half a cupful of rich tomato sauce. Cook for five minutes, then add one cupful of clear chicken broth, cook for five minutes longer, then add the lobster and salt to taste. As soon as the lobster is heated through it is ready to serve.

A VEGETARIAN CUTLET.

Four hard boiled eggs, one and one-half pound of field mushrooms, three tablespoonfuls of water, a little rice flour, one ounce of butter and a pinch of salt. To make the cutlet peel the mushrooms and cook them for ten minutes in the water. Drain and chop them with the eggs. Add butter to the liquid and thicken with the rice flour, stirring in the chopped egg and mushrooms. Press the mixture into cutlet tins, and when cold turn out and fry. Serve with peas and mint sauce.

Some Ways of Women.

DURING the winter months the windows are apt to get frosted over and look very ugly. To remedy this they should first be cleaned and rubbed with pure glycerin. Polish lightly with a clean dry cloth and the windows will keep clean for weeks.

To spread butter easily on the thinnest bread in cold weather have a cup of boiling water handy, into which dip the point of the knife each time before cutting a piece from the butter. This renders it just right for spreading evenly. New bread or cake may be cut without jagged edges if the blade of the knife used be heated for a second.

When hanging up the broom or dust-brush or dustpan use fine wire instead of cord. It not only looks better and wears longer than cord, which is soon soiled, but is much easier to hang the article up by. The time saved in slipping the wire over the hook will more than repay one for the trouble of providing it.

One woman makes her gloves last longer by turning the fingers wrong side out when the gloves are new and pasting small strips of cotton plaster over the seams. It is probable that most of us would not be that painstaking, but if new gloves make an appreciable hole in one's pocketbook the scheme might be worth trying.

In Japan the wife is inferior to her husband and also to his parents, with whom she resides and is obliged to obey. Japanese husbands and wives never walk out side by side, and if the wife dies before her spouse he does not attend the funeral, but sends the children.

In one of the New Zealand cemeteries is a grave on which the following words are inscribed after the age and name of the dead girl: "She Was... Pleasant." What a delightful character she must have been to deserve such an epitaph, a most lovable girl. Young women ought to live their lives to merit the praise given to the dead girl in that far off land, for, alas, many girls nowadays might be rightly called unpleasant, if not snippy.

Mrs. W. Hinckle Smith of Philadelphia is a society woman who annually celebrates her birthday, a fact that would be of little interest except that each year she takes as many children for an outing on that day as she is years old. Consequently her age is well known, and that is so unusual that it is worth mentioning.

An original use for a discarded cradle was hit upon by Queen Sophie of Sweden when she had the cradle in which the royal children were rocked lined with tin so that it might be used as a receptacle for flowers. The cradle is a wonderful piece of workmanship in ebony and pearl and was presented to the late King Oscar by the sultan of Turkey.

Here's the "Chantecler" Hat

ALL the rage in Paris now is the "Chantecler" hat, modeled in honor of Edmond Rostand's new play, the

"Chantecler," in which all the characters are represented as animals or fowls. The hat typifies in itself the leading role of the unique play, having a whole rooster for trimming. We may expect to see the "Chantecler" hat in America soon, and who he unto the barnyard chanteclers when it arrives!

A HINT FOR ENGAGED COUPLES. The wise young couple who are not blessed with too many of this world's goods and who are going to face the future together will find it a good plan to have a self denials money box and occasionally drop into it the money which might be spent on little jaunts which every girl looks forward to. There's no need to be too self denying, as moderate amusement is a real tonic, but if Jack puts the money away that sometimes he meant to spend on flowers or the theater and Jill does likewise with the money she spends on chocolate or chiffons there will be found to be quite a nice sum at the end of the year in the "self denials" box, which can be laid out eventually in the new home.

When the Lamp Is Lit

Musings of Elinor Hite

IT seems to me, a mere woman, that the charm of a girl lies not in beauty, but in individuality, if she could be brought to understand that fact. It isn't the details that count. It is, as Trilby said, "the altogether"—her carriage, her manner, her voice, her expression; in short, herself—that makes or unmakes her charm. It is the woman, then, who has the courage to be herself that attracts.

The Care of Household Linens

OUR great-grandmothers would be delighted could they but see the almost veneration which the woman of today who knows what's what has for a precious heirloom in the shape of a handsome tablecloth. The ladies of long ago went abroad to purchase their linens armed with a magnifying glass through which the threads were scanned to see whether they lay flat and close, as well behaved threads should do.

Then they would wet a corner of the material with the tips of their dainty fingers, expecting to see the moisture appear very quickly on the other side. Finally, as a last test, they would crumple a corner of the linen to make sure there was no dressing of chalk, scan the threads again to be certain that warp and woof were of equal quality, and then, no doubt, they would insist upon buying the linen by weight. So many dollars' worth of linen does to modern ears sound rather queer, but if this method of purchase were still in vogue there would be linens without adulterations of chalk to hand down to granddaughters.

The wise housewife of today, having acquired a goodly store of linen, strives to keep the supply at high water mark of perfection. She buys in small quantities at a fair price every year, and in this way that uncomfortable peculiarity linen has of going "all at once," just when there is an extra call upon the household purse, is avoided. Make it a rule to put all new and freshly laundered linen at the bottom of the pile every time, so that the wear will

Originals are so much more desirable than copies, no matter how accurate the copy may be. Even in the matter of modes this theory holds good. If it be natural to wear one's hair in a certain fashion, by all means do so. Don't try a mop or a swirl. Nature is never mistaken.

But let the admiring sister whom that same autocrat intended to be a tailor make girl beware of disorder. In her it would cease to be artistic. It would be simply untidy.

Let every girl dare to be herself, develop her own individuality and not blindly copy some other girl whom, it may be, somebody for whose opinion she has a great respect admires. Let her think for herself, act for herself and express her own honest opinions.

For individuality when combined with that nameless something we call manner is the most potent weapon in the possession of the sex. It is this charm which has given many a homely woman a reputation for beauty which a bona fide beauty with faultless face and features has sighed in vain to attain.

be evenly distributed and no articles left to discolor through disuse. Extra quality cloths and table napkins are, however, often reserved for occasional use, and these should always be put apart from the regular stock and kept unstarched, as starch rots the threads in time. This does not mean that they must be perfectly limp, but merely that they should be put up in the French way. The Frenchwoman never uses starch. Clean cloths are wrung tightly out of hot water and the cloths ironed at once with heavy and very hot irons.

The finished linen is glossy, smooth and of just the right stiffness. Linen so treated will last for many, many years.

This places on linen should be darned with fine sewing cotton before they reach the "holey" stage. Sheets thin in the middle should be turned, outer edge inward, and finely seamed in order to avoid an irritating ledge. Worn tablecloths can be cut down into tray cloths, table napkins and dollies. Accidents are responsible for stains on the linen, carelessness in ironing for scorches, neglect and disuse for mildew and the yellow tint so often thought unavoidable.

A stain treated while still wet is easier to remove than when dry. Put salt at once on a fruit stain. When the table is cleared rub a little salt in with a piece of lemon, hold the stain over a basin and pour boiling water through.

A scorch is a serious accident, as the threads of the linen are weakened. To remove this put on a paste of starch and rub it in with an onion. For a really bad scorch make a paste of fuller's earth and vinegar. Add a little dry soap to this and rub the paste into the scorch with an onion. Let it dry and repeat if necessary.

Mildew of long standing can generally be removed by rubbing with dry soap and starch mixed to a paste and rubbed in with a raw potato. Put the linen in the sun and the stain will disappear as it dries.

Helps In the Household

FOR keeping clothes white put in the boiler three or four slices of lemon when the water is cold. It will do no injury to the clothes, but will whiten them beautifully.

If new gloves are placed between folds of a damp towel for an hour before being worn they are much easier to put on. The damp causes the kid to become more pliable so that the gloves will stretch to the required shape without cracking or splitting.

DON'T DARN STOCKINGS. Darning stockings used to be a prevalent industry, but nowadays paraffin the useful articles has taken its place in a measure. Clever mothers have proved to their satisfaction that paraffin rubbed over the heels, soles and toes of stockings when they are new impart a strength to the threads that doubles their wearing qualities. This is a boon to many an overburdened woman to whom "the darning" is the last straw required to make the day more than she can bear.

A LAUNDRY HINT. When doing up collars and cuffs put them in cold starch made by mixing two tablespoonfuls of starch with one pint of cold water. Just before ironing rub on each article a little soap, then with a clean white damp rag rub lightly on the right side a little prepared chalk. The iron will glide along and will give a lovely gloss.

This innovation has created an era in opera, and it is likely that other great permanent organizations will follow the lead.

WIFE WHO HELPED HUSBAND.

Some of the greatest men have ascribed their worldly success as well as their happiness to their wives. The celebrated sculptor Flaxman married Anne Flaxman, a charming and lovable woman, who said, when her husband told her that Sir Joshua Reynolds expressed his opinion that marriage had ruined his future career as an artist: "I will never have it said that Anne Flaxman ruined John Flaxman for an artist." "A great artist you shall be and visit Rome." "But how?" asked Flaxman. "Work and economize," said his wife. For five years Mrs. Flaxman practiced the most unselfish economy, and at last her efforts were rewarded, and the seven years that Flaxman spent studying in Rome fruitfully established his position in after life as a great sculptor, and he always acknowledged his wife's devotion had practically founded his future success.

TERM OF SHERIFFS

Bill in Legislature Extends It to Five Years

BOSTON, Feb. 26.—The house of representatives yesterday passed to a third reading by a roll call vote of 105 to 90 the bill extending terms of sheriffs from three years to five, after one of the sharpest and liveliest debates of the session.

During his speech in opposition to the bill Mr. O'Brien of Boston declared that the "worst lobby ever known at the state house, men who are known to have some mysterious influence in the courts of Suffolk county, who in the past have had something to do with juries and their verdicts," had been working for the bill.

Debate on the measure was opened by Mr. Mellen of Braintree, who pointed out that sheriffs are usually given many years in office and he believed less frequent elections would result in an even better discharge of their duties.

White for the Bill
Mr. Cummings of Pittsfield opposed the bill, on the ground that the present law gives ample opportunity to keep a good man in office, while a chance should be given to the wild of a bad man as soon as possible.

Mr. White of Brookline favored the bill, as did Mr. Warren of Chelsea and Mr. Cushing of Boston, while it was opposed by Mr. Turner of Waltham and Mr. O'Brien of Boston.

Mr. Knight of Boston also spoke in opposition, on the ground that no reason for the passage of the bill has been given; he believed the county rings are already strong enough.

Rayley of Lexington and Brayton of Fall River closed debate for the bill, on a rising vote it was ordered to a third reading, 75 to 72. On a roll call the result was 105 to 90.

Remington's Pension Approved
The legality of the retirement of Ex-Sergeant-at-Arms Remington was again brought before the house when Representative O'Brien of Boston moved to strike out of a pension bill an appropriation of $170 for the payment of his pension.

He said it was never intended to permit any head of a state department to recommend his own retirement or to permit the retirement of any elected official.

Mr. Bean of Cambridge said the committee on ways and means, in reporting the bill, knew nothing of the interest of a previous legislature in passing the present law; it found a law on the statute books which in the opinion of the attorney-general permits the retirement of this former official, and it therefore provided an appropriation for it. The amendment was rejected.

Milk Stations
In the house yesterday these committee reports were received:
Public health—A bill to give local boards of health greater power over establishments; a bill authorizing the establishment of milk distributing stations in places having more than 10,000 inhabitants; leave to withdraw was given on the bill providing for appeals from local boards of health.

Rules—Leave to withdraw on the bill providing for an investigation of the disbursement of the Chelsea fire relief fund.

Labor—A resolve providing for a commission of five to investigate factory inspection.

Military affairs—Leave to withdraw on bills providing for a second-class armory in East Boston.

Legality of Schofield Bill
An order was reported in the house asking the opinion of the supreme court as to the constitutionality of the Schofield gratuity bill.

Convention Delegates Bill
In his maiden speech in the house Mr. McGrath of Natick moved to substitute for an adverse committee report a bill providing that only delegates and alternates elected in caucus shall be seated in political conventions.

The hour of adjournment cut off debate.

Work of the Senate
In the senate yesterday afternoon reports of committees were read as follows:

Labor, a bill to punish the forging of birth certificates.

Mercantile affairs, leave to withdraw on the petition of Frank W. Thayer for legislation to require the use of safety guards for elevators.

Metropolitan affairs, leave to withdraw on the petition of Edward R. Warren and others, for legislation to use a portion of Franklin park for an historical pageant.

Labor, a bill to perfect the codification of the labor laws of last year by inserting the words "state inspector of health" for "district police" where latter occurs in the law as to inspection of workshops and factories.

On motion of Senator Mahoney of Holyoke the report on salaries of Suffolk county probate judges was postponed to March 4, and on motion of Senator Russell of Boston the bills were suspended and the bill for the appointment of assistant assessors in Worcester in March was engrossed. The senate adjourned at 1.30 p.m.

Committee Hearings
The committee on legal affairs yesterday gave a hearing on Representative John L. Donovan's bill to prohibit women under 21 from entering unescorted a Chinese restaurant. Mr. Donovan, ex-Rep. William Newton of South Boston, Dr. Wm. E. Brown, ex-Pres. Connelley, Rep. O'Donnell, Mrs. Susan E. Stevens, Charlotte B. Smith and the Lowell police board urged the bill.

It was opposed by Rep. Freeman O. Emerson, John Ingram, L. G. Brockway of Lynn, Horace D. King of Lynn, Charles E. Sherry of Boston, Walter R. Hayes of Boston, and others.

Henry V. Cunningham, Henry Westinghouse, president of the archdiocese board of the American Federation of Catholic societies, Mr. A. J. Toelling of Lynn, Rev. Andrew J. F. Reilly of Weymouth, and others in favor of three bills to extend the provisions of existing law to prohibit even the suggestion of that which is obscene or likely to injure the morals of the young in bill posters, pictures, moving picture shows and also for the bill to prohibit the admission of children under 14 during hours when they should be at school or after 6 o'clock in the afternoon.

The petition of Mary Morton Kehew that the bureau of statistics shall investigate conditions that obtain in employment and intelligence offices, was given a hearing by the committee on legal affairs.

A hearing was given by the committee on education on the petition of Jas. F. Carey, to raise the compulsory school limit, which is now 14 to 16. Representative Merrill of Haverhill spoke in advocacy of the measure, while President Frederick P. Fish of the state board of education and Mrs. Frank W. Page were heard in opposition.

Hearings were given by the committee on metropolitan affairs on two bills affecting Cambridge and Somerville. The first called for the building of a boulevard from Broadway park, Somerville, and the other for the erection of a bath house on the Mystic river, Somerville. Mayor Woods of Somerville, Charles W. Elliot, president emeritus of Harvard, and City Solicitor Kaan of Somerville appeared in favor of the boulevard measure, while Arthur M. Spring, assistant corporation counsel of Boston, opposed it.

MAYOR MEEHAN

Calls Special Meeting of Aldermen

BOARD WILL CONSIDER STATE HIGHWAY

Matter of Great Importance to Lowell and For Which Our Endorsement and Contribution is Requisite

Mayor Meehan has called a special meeting of the aldermen for this evening to draw jurors. The board will also consider the question of the new Lowell-Lawrence road which went to the common council last Monday night. The question went to the common council in the form of an order requesting the city solicitor to go before the committee on roads and bridges and favor the bill for the Lowell-Lawrence road. The order was introduced by Councilman Achin by request of Senator Hilborn. The question was put as to the adoption of the order, and it was unanimously voted not to send the city solicitor to Boston to advocate the road. Another order of a similar nature will go to the board of aldermen this evening, at least that was the story at city hall this forenoon.

WIDOW LOSES

IN SUIT BROUGHT AGAINST ROYAL ARCANUM

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Feb. 26.—Justice W. S. Andrews yesterday set aside a verdict of $3000 in favor of Mary C. Wilcox against the Royal Arcanum. The justice had directed a verdict for the full amount claimed, but after considering the case reversed his decision.

Mary C. Wilcox is the widow of Frank Z. Wilcox, who was expelled from the Royal Arcanum. The court holds that Wilcox was not a member of the society; that the action of the supreme council in expelling him was voidable but not void.

Mrs. Wilcox is now allowed to bring proceedings to have the supreme council's action declared void.

WARREN C. SHAW

HANOVER, N. H., Feb. 26.—Spirited clashes between fraternity and the non-fraternity members of the senior class of Dartmouth college marked the election of permanent and commencement day officers here last night. # ARREST OF KELLY

Now Has Been Made an International Affair

WOODSTOCK, N. Y., Feb. 26.—The recent arrest of William Kelly of Richmond, N. Y., and his subsequent conviction in a United States court at Portland, Me., following which he was sentenced to a fourteen year term in the federal penitentiary at Atlanta, Ga., for an assault on an American customs officer, has been under the subject of an international affair. Correspondence received here shows that James Bryce, British ambassador to the United States, has made representations to Secretary of State Knox that Kelly was arrested by American officials on Canadian soil and was forcibly taken across the border to Montreal.

Me. Ambassador Bryce, it is stated, has requested Kelly's immediate release, and the matter of damages claimed by Kelly will be taken up later. Secretary Knox's reply to Ambassador Bryce's request is now awaited with interest here. Frank Carvel, M. T. of Carleton county, made the representations in behalf of Kelly to Ambassador Bryce. Mr. Carvel attended Kelly's trial in the United States court at Portland.

Kelly, it is alleged, was a notorious smuggler along the Maine-New Brunswick boundary, and the assault on customs officer Carvel of Montreal, was the result of a smuggling episode.

THINLY CLAD WOMEN GOING TO WORK IN THE MILLS

COLD MORNING SKETCHES

CHIEF HAMILTON CONFESS THEFTS

Of Lawrence Fire Dept. Two Men Arrested by Worcester Police

LAWRENCE, Feb. 26.—Chief Engineer James A. Hamilton of the fire department figured in a runaway accident while responding to an alarm from box 37 yesterday, which may retard the progress of his recovery from serious injuries sustained at the Eutaw street fire on Feb. 14.

By a coincidence the alarm was from the same box as was sounded for the Eutaw street fire and was the first bell alarm since Feb. 14.

In turning the corner of Lawrence and Common streets the sleigh overturned and the chief and his driver, Daniel O'Neill, were thrown out, the horse continuing up Lawrence street.

Near Lawrence and Valley streets the sleigh struck a pump containing Mrs. Jane Devine of West Andover, damaging the pump and shaking up the woman, although she was not sufficiently injured to require the services of a physician.

The chief jumped into a sleigh with Assistant Agent Fred H. Sargent of the Lawrence Gas company and proceeded toward the fire when he met James F. Colgate, Jr., New Haven, Conn.; Noah F. Foss, Plymouth; Harold P. Jackson, Montpelier, Vt.; Walter H. Norton, Winthrop, Mass.; John C. Shambour, Woonsocket, R. I.; and Geo. C. Shinn, Medford, Mass.; auditing committee, Howard L. Fogg, Hyde Park, Mass.; Albert F. Hill, Attleboro, Mass.; and Roger G. Pierce, Dorchester, Mass.

These class day officers were elected: Address to the president, Ben A. Williams, Jackson, Ohio; address to the class, Edwin O. Raabe, Fitchburg, Mass.; address to old pine, Ralph B. Jones, Huntington Beach, Cal.; orators, James Russell Lowell, Portland, Me.; and Charles O. Libbey, Jr., Bangor, Me.; Rollo G. Reynolds, Cambridge, Vt.; and Walter H. J. Goldie, Brooklyn, N. Y.

The chief was ordered to bed by his physician. Driver O'Neill sustained a laceration in the head.

JUSTICE GOFF

Expresses Pity for Girl He Sentenced

NEW YORK, Feb. 26.—Justice Goff, in the criminal branch of the supreme court yesterday, disposed of the case of Clara D. Pasquale, who was convicted of killing her new born baby, by sending her to the state prison for women at Auburn for not less than two years nor more than three years and six months.

"This case has given me a great deal of mental anxiety," the justice remarked in imposing sentence, "and if I consulted my own wishes in the matter I suppose I would deal differently with her. She is a poor, unfortunate creature, but the duty of office as judge precludes his feelings from interfering with his duty."

The woman, who is 17 years old, killed her baby last September by throwing it out of a window. When last arraigned for sentence, sympathetic persons begged Justice Goff to release her on a suspended sentence, promising to support her in case of her release.

BIG FIRE SCARE EXCITING SCENE

On East River Front in Young Girl Jumped from Deck of Cruiser

New York

NEW YORK, Feb. 26.—A spectacular fire on the East river front today gave the firemen a hard fight from both the land and water sides to prevent its disastrous spread to nearby tenement structures. As it was the loss is estimated at upwards of $50,000, chiefly to the paper warehouses of Nicholas Canlasano & Co. at 185 South street, a four story structure, which was practically burned to the ground. A squad of firemen had a narrow escape when the north wall of the building collapsed scattering bricks and debris about them.

THREE CONFESS

According to Story Told by Police

SPRINGFIELD, Feb. 26.—The six yeggmen arrested Monday morning on suspicion of blowing the safe in the junk shop of Fisher & Kurnitsky, 53 Liberty street, appeared before Judge H. W. Bosworth in police court yesterday. John W. Lynch, alias John McDonald; Henry Leavenworth and Michael O'Leary waived examination on the charge of breaking and entering the junk shop and each was held in $500 for grand jury. The cases of Henry F. Wallace and Frank Wilson, charged with having burglarized tools in their possession, were continued to next Tuesday for a hearing. Daniel Lynch, brother of John W. Lynch, was also held on a technical charge of larceny. The last three were held in $500 each.

According to Capt. John H. Boyle the three charged with breaking and entering have confessed the robbery, asserting that the other men are innocent of any offense. The finding of some nitro glycerine fuses, two revolvers, cartridges and other burglars' implements in a room in the "Wood-box," occupied by Wilson and Wallace, led to their implication in the break, and the court found ground for holding them on the charge of having the tools in their possession.

Although nothing incriminating has been found by the police against Daniel Lynch, Capt. Boyle has identified him as a man with a criminal record. Harry Leavenworth refuses to give his real name, he alleges, inasmuch as the authorities of other cities are looking for him. Capt. Boyle says he has sent Leavenworth's picture to all the cities and towns in the eastern part of the state, in an attempt to establish his identity. The Boston police know the other five members of the gang, whom they assert have been implicated in breaks committed in Boston and vicinity.

Sheriff Maurice Fitzgerald of Hampshire Co. came here yesterday on the proposition that one of the men might be a son of James Blake of New Bedford, who robbed the post office in St. Hadley seven years ago, but he was unable to identify him.

BIG ATHLETIC MEET

BOSTON, Feb. 26.—With an added incentive in the form of a new cup being competed for, nearly four hundred school athletes gathered in Mechanics building today at the twenty-first annual indoor track championship meeting of the New England Interscholastic A. A. The meet was held under the auspices of the Boston A. A. club.

For the new cup the Phillips Exeter academy became permanent owner of the old cup given by the B. A. A. having won several legs on it at former meets. Although there were many strong athletes representing the numerous high preparatory schools entered in today's meet, yet this champion was again the favorite and it looked as though the New Hampshire boys would carry off the honors. Worcester academy, the runner-up in 1909, and Phillips Andover academy, were, however, picked as strong contenders for the highest number of points.

A special train carried the Exeter delegation to this city.

BRUTAL ATTACK

Man Was Stabbed by Five Men

NEW YORK, Feb. 26.—Detectives scoured the city yesterday in a search for the five men who rode all over the west side in a taxicab Thursday and found Jacob Greenthal, and when they found him attacked him murderously, stabbing him eight times and slashing his tongue.

Greenthal's condition was critical yesterday. He formerly took an active interest in political matters. He got into trouble at a west side polling place last election day.

That the motive for attack was not robbery is shown by the fact that $562, which the man had in his possession, was not disturbed. There has been no arrest.
